Mr. Ford's New Road
An American Canal
Puzzling Prices
What of Our Own Errors?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

More than ninety-nine per cent. of the people will congratulate President Harding on having made the Panama Canal a really AMERICAN canal. What is needed is further legislation along this line.

Make the Canal absolutely free to all American ships, until tolls paid by the ships of other countries shall have paid the cost of the canal. Then make the canal free to American coastwise shipping, all others paying actual cost of keeping the canal open. The United States navy to control the canal always.

The baseball fury dies down. Those that were beaten and seemed to be last are first, as it is written. For some time to come, millions of young gentlemen will find it difficult to concentrate their minds on anything. Football will offer some slight, merciful relief. How would it be, the chances of the Giants and the Yankees being settled, to spend a few minutes calculating our own chances, in a more important championship contest in which we are all interested as babies, and in which most of us shine, not very brilliantly; if youth would pay attention to its own "errors" it would do better.

Mr. Ford is buying another railroad, gradually working his way from his big Michigan plants down to Muscle Shoals. Mr. Ford has offered the Government all that it put into the Muscle Shoals plant, more than 100 millions. The Ford plan is to use Muscle Shoals to make cheap fertilizer for the farmers, keep the plant constantly in working order, ready to provide ammunition when needed in case of war, and also to use power for experiments in metallurgy, which would be of value to the entire country.

If Mr. Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals is refused, it will mean that graft, corporation influence, or both, are as powerful as usual.

This will interest editors only, but it WILL interest them. Mr. Hershman, who owns the Pittsburgh Press, sends out a pink slip giving the United States government circulation statement for October 1, 1921. The Press daily circulation, bigger by 50 per cent. than any other evening paper, gained 21,000 copies in the year, and 2,800 since last April. Every Pittsburgh evening competitor has lost since last April.

Mr. Hershman's Sunday Press, with circulation almost 100 per cent. greater than any other Pittsburgh Sunday paper, gained 31,000 in the last year and has gained 8,000 since April 1. Every other Pittsburgh Sunday paper has lost since April 1. The figures interest this particular column, which appears in the Pittsburgh Press every day in the first column of the first page.

Other newspapers printing this column are invited to send any triumphant circulation figures to the writer.

The United States Steel Corporation, although two-thirds of its gigantic plants be idle, issues orders to spend ten million dollars building new plants, where workers of the company are idle. Judge Gary or somebody else proves that the steel company looks ahead and knows the: plants two-thirds idle now will soon be two-thirds too small.

"No gold, no trading," is the message sent by the British Chancellor of the Exchequer to Russia. "Useless to send goods," says the Chancellor; "the Russians have nothing to send in exchange. That means, no gold. This country sent gold, good money, ten thousand millions of it, when there was little chance of getting it back. It is one thing to help continue war, another thing to help a devastated country to recover. But what will Russian Bolshevism do in Asia, Persia and other lands that interest England?

2 DIE IN REVERE AIR CRASH

BLAZING PLANE IN 100-FT. FALL

Winchester and Lynn Flyers Fatally Crushed Under Wreck of Machine

Two men were killed and the machine smashed into kindling today when one of the airplanes of the Lynn Aero Transportation Company, with headquarters at Point of Pines, near Revere, crashed from an altitude of 100 feet into the edge of Lynn marshes.

THE DEAD:

Edward Foster, Pilot, of Winchester.

Fletcher Anderson, Clinton street, West Lynn, mechanician.

Both were horribly crushed and mangled under the debris of the wrecked machine, and died before they reached the Frost Hospital, Chelsea, where they were hurried in passing automobiles.

Hundreds of people in Beachmont, Point of Pines and Revere witnessed the accident and reached the spot where the wrecked airplane was lying within a few moments after it crashed.

LEFT WING CRUMPLES.

According to the story told by a number of eye witnesses to the tragedy, the plane had been circling above the waters of Lynn Bay and the shore near the marshes when it suddenly went into a spiral nose dive.

At that time it appeared to be eight or nine hundred feet up in the air. When about 100 feet above the ground it was seen that the pilot, Foster, was making desperate efforts to right his machine.

Then, without warning apparently, as Foster banked sharply, the left wing crumpled and the machine slipped and smashed to earth.

Elmer Spinelli, No. 70 Waite street, Revere, one of the first to reach the spot, realized there was a possible chance that the two men were alive and he succeeded in drawing out Foster, who was placed in the car of Alphonse Digisa, of Revere, and rushed to the Chelsea Hospital. He was dead when he reached there.

WAS WITHOUT LICENSE.

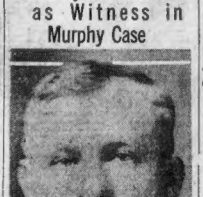

Anderson, the mechanician, was breathing when he was dragged out of the wreckage and hurried into an automobile of the Revere Public Works Department and rushed to the hospital. He died a few minutes after his arrival.

Foster, the police declared, was without a State license to operate an airplane, and the plane itself was not registered in Massachusetts. It was a monoplane constructed by Barney Johnson, employed by the transportation company, and was on its way to Providence to take part in an air tournament.

According to O. Wellington Snell of No. 106 Lynn Way, West Lynn, and treasurer of the transportation company, who saw the wreck, the sharp bank by the pilot in his effort to pull out of the nose spin was more than the structure of the machine could stand and the left wing snapped under the strain.

Attorney Who Testified as Witness in Murphy Case

DAVID STONEMAN

LIQUOR AGENT GOES ON TRIAL FOR BRIBERY

Worcester Man Says Daniel Ryan Suggested Payment of $700 to Attorney

Charged with having accepted bribes while acting as Federal prohibition agent, Daniel Ryan of New Jersey went on trial before Judge James M. Morton, Jr. and a jury in United States Court today.

Ryan was a prohibition officer in Worcester in 1920, and it was in the fall of that year that he is alleged to have solicited bribes. United States District Attorney Robert O. Harris prosecutes the case and William Garland appeared for the defendant.

Harris announced that he intended to prove that Ryan took $700 from Abraham Rabinovits of Worcester; $500 from Louis Kronenman; $400 from Lewis Kunin; and $100 from Wallace Levenson.

Rabinovits was the first witness. He said that he was arrested last year following the seizure of a truck load of liquor consigned to him. Ryan came to see him, he said, and suggested that he go to see Elias Pofcher, a Worcester attorney, and that "everything would be all right." Rabinovits continued that he did see Pofcher, paid him $700 in the belief that his case would be adjusted and he would get his liquor back, and believed then and does now that the money was for Ryan.

BABY FOUND BRUISED ON HOSPITAL STEPS

Providence, Oct. 14.—Hurled against a flight of stone steps, her little body bruised and bleeding and a towel wound about her face to stop her cries, a two-day-old baby girl was found early today at the entrance to the out-patient department of the Rhode Island Hospital.

The skin was rubbed off the child's knees and dirt had been ground into her face when she was violently deposited on the steps. Hospital attendants believe that the child was brought to the hospital in an automobile and that whoever it was that brought her was violent through fear rather than intentional cruelty.

EXAMINATION OF SIMMONS SHELD UP BY ILLNESS

Washington, Oct. 14.—William J. Simmons, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, was prevented by illness today from appearing before a House committee for examination by members as to the activities of the order.

The Imperial Wizard collapsed yesterday at the close of a five-hour statement and later was placed in charge of a physician, who ordered him to stay in bed.

Raids to Stop Home Brewing

TOLD ABOUT HUGS AND KISSES

Mrs. Paul's Repudiated Affidavit and Bribery Charge in Murphy Case Evidence

Hugs, kisses, kimono scenes and alleged attempts to bribe witnesses figured today in the testimony at the trial of the divorce suit of Joseph A. Murphy against Frances Stuart Murphy, art model and motion picture actress.

The first sensation of the day came with the reading of the repudiated affidavit of Mrs. May Paul, Beacon street divorcee and one-time friend of the Murphys.

The affidavit declared that Mrs. Paul had seen Mrs. Murphy and Edward Rose, the Newton millionaire who is named as co-respondent, hugging and kissing in Mrs. Murphy's bedroom, and that Mrs. Murphy was scantily clad; that she saw Rose, minus hat, coat and vest, in the apartment with Mrs. Murphy; that Mrs. Murphy was on that occasion only partly dressed.

Mrs. Paul has also repudiated this testimony, saying that she did not know what the affidavit contained when she signed it.

"OFFERED HER $1,500."

Joseph Murphy, the husband, took the stand to explode the second sensation of the day—the charge that Mrs. Paul admitted to him some weeks ago that Rose had offered her bribes aggregating $1,500 to testify for him in the divorce action and the $100,000 alienation suit which will follow it.

"She told me, when I saw her in New York, that she had only enough money to pay her expenses back to Boston," said the witness, "but that Rose would give her $1,000 to testify for him; $500 to stay away altogether and not take the stand against him."

This testimony was corroborated by William B. Santosuosso, a law clerk in the office of Joseph A. Santosuosso, Murphy's attorney.

Mrs. Paul was recalled to the stand and denied with every appearance of indignation that she had ever made such a statement. She maintained that her change of testimony was made because she had discovered that the affidavit she had signed contained allegations she never meant to make.

Mrs. Paul continued that on the occasion of teh meeting in New York Murphy informed her he intended to have some of the witnesses in the case arrested for bribery. This he denied.

BAR MAY HEAR CHARGES.

As the taking of testimony in the celebrated case closed there was a lively rumor to the effect that certain of the evidence was to be turned over to the Suffolk County Bar Association. The arguments will be made before the session of the Supreme Court to be held in Springfield a week from tomorrow.

Attorney Santosuosso read the repudiated affidavit of Mrs. Paul, while the crowd of well-dressed men and women who filled the courtroom listened with keen interest. It contained, among other charges, the following:

That she saw Rose and Mrs. Murphy hugging and kissing in Mrs. Murphy's bedroom at No. 78 Kirkland street, Cambridge.

FIND BODY OF WOMAN IN RIVER

Mrs. H. Oliver Bixby, Missing Since Sunday, Died in the Charles

The body of Mrs. Alice Marian Bixby, wife of Dr. H. Oliver Bixby, a North Cambridge dentist, was found floating in the Charles River opposite the parkway on Willard street, Cambridge, today.

Mrs. Bixby had been missing from her home, No. 13 Saginaw avenue, North Cambridge, since Sunday night. The condition of the body, according to the police, indicated that it had been in the water since that time.

Pedestrians along the Willard street parkway observed the floating form in the river shortly after noon. They shouted to a Harvard oarsman who was rowing in a shell to investigate. He reported that he saw the body of a woman.

Edward F. Mills, No. 27 Willard street, who was on the bank, waded into the stream and brought the body ashore. Officer O'Connor of the Metropolitan Park police took charge.

Dr. Albert August, a Cambridge surgeon who performed two operations on Mrs. Bixby, made the identification.

Upon leaving her home last Sunday night, Mrs. Bixby announced that she was going for a walk. The fact that her body had apparently been in the Charles River since that time led the police to believe that she had decided to take her own life by drowning.

"HIPPO" VAUGHN, FORMER PITCHER, IS MISSING

Chicago, Oct. 14.—James (Hippo) Vaughn, former star pitcher of the Cubs, is missing. Three-year-old "Little Hippo" is crying for daddy to come home, and Mrs. Vaughn has called on the police to try to find Vaughn. Vaughn was to have been the central figure at a baseball carnival here next Sunday and his whereabouts is a mystery.

$1,000,000 LOSS IN CHARLESTON BLAZE

Charleston, S. C., Oct. 14.—Estimates of loss from the fire which last night destroyed two-thirds of the Columbus street docks of the Charleston Terminal Company were placed today at $1,000,000. Most of the loss was in fertilizer materials stored in wooden warehouses. A northeast wind keeping the flames from the more valuable upper warehouses.

CHARGED WITH THEFT FROM DISABLED VET

Thomas Dunlap, Centre street, Roxbury, faced the Roxbury Court today, charged with taking a $30 stick pin from Ralph J. Kennedy, a gas patient at the Parker Hill Hospital. He pleaded not guilty, and his case was continued to Wednesday.

MRS. HALE SUES FOR CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

Seeks to Recover $4,000 That Went to Aid Farmer-Labor Party Candidates

Society circles of Boston, Buzzards Bay and New York were all aflutter today over the news that Mrs. Marie Tudor Garland Hale, mother of Charles Garland, who refused to accept $1,000,000 from the estate of his father, James A. Garland, has brought suit in New York to recover $4,000 she claims to have loaned to the Farmer-Labor Party, headed by Duncky Field Malone.

Her friends here also were astonished to learn that she was "the angel" of that party in the Empire State last Fall, and that since then she has been backing it liberally.

The filing of the suit in New York disclosed the fact that from her had come most of the funds spent to elect Malone. The suit is against William Kohn, chairman of the party.

ARRESTS TO ENFORCE 'DRY' LAW

Boston Hootch Makers Now Facing Prosecution in Nation-Wide Campaign

Orders from Washington for the storming of John Barleycorn's last refuge, Home Brew, are expected by Elmer C. Potter, Federal prohibition agent here, either late today or early tomorrow. Home brewers face arrest.

At the national capital the edict has gone out that home brewing must be stopped. Roy A. Haynes, prohibition commissioner, has directed the a nation-wide campaign to put an end to the making of beer, ale and "hooch" at home shall begin as soon as the necessary preparations can be made in district headquarters.

Pending the arrival of the detailed instructions from Washington, Potter today declined to discuss the matter at all, further than to say that he had seen the reports.

According to Assistant Prohibition Enforcement Agent MacMasters the field in Boston for new activities is tremendous. Virtually 95 per cent. of all liquor seized in raids is home made.

Both MacMasters and other chiefs of the enforcement staff admitted, however, that there is going to be some tremendous difficulties to be overcome before the home brewed "hooch" and other beverages can be driven out.

Even if arrests are made and raids are constant, there is going to be ever-increasing difficulty in getting convictions, thinks MacMasters, who pointed out that this difficulty has always

Turn Over.

A similar suit against Malone, demanding $2,500 on a personal note, was filed several days ago in New York.

In her complaint Mrs. Hale alleges that the money she advanced to the party was to "form a working capital until other funds could be obtained and was to be paid back."

The agreement signed by the leaders of the party stated that they realized that Mrs. Garland, as she then was, was relying "upon the legal and moral responsibility of the party."

CRUDE OIL UP 15 TO 25 CENTS A BARREL

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.—Purchasing agencies today announced an advance in quotations on various grades of crude oil. Pennsylvania crude, Cabell, Somerset and Somerset light were quoted 25 cents higher. Ragland was advanced 15 cents, while Corning remained unchanged, at $1.00. The new prices are: Pennsylvania crude, $2.35; Cabell, $2.11; Somerset, $1.90; Somerset light, $2.15; Ragland, $1.00.

Cars That More Than Measure Up

Such are the cars and car accessories advertised for sale over in the Want Ad section under the heading "Automobile Exchange." The cars, for the most part, have seen service, but when the ads say that they have been put in first-class repair, and that they will give their full quota of service, you may depend upon these ads as honest.

Investigate these offers, and you will realize how conservative the descriptions in the ads were, and you will understand how much satisfaction may be purchased for a modest sum.

Do not be without a car because you feel that you cannot afford one. Turn now to the classified columns and read over the offers there. Then investigate. If you want something just a little different from the cars advertised, run an ad of your own, saying what it is you want, and you will find it without delay. When your ad is ready, leave it with or stood in the pathway of those who would have attempted to put an end to home brewing.

He pointed out that there are literally scores of hardware stores in various parts of the city catering to the demand for materials and ingredients for making home-made liquor, as well as beers and ales.

One hardware store recently opened in a suburb advertises extensively "why not make your own?" and then lists the things it has for sale for the use of the home brewer and distiller.

THE PRIVATE STILLS.

Even in cases where private stills are found after a raid it is difficult to prove that they are being used illegally. There are many perfectly legitimate uses to which they can be put, said MacMasters. For instance, all electric automobiles recharge their batteries with distilled water and if the owner does not wish to get it from a garage he must get it from his own still.

Hardware stores in the vicinity of Portland street are reported to be selling huge quantities of copper tubing, bottling sets and other "moon accessories" to men and women desiring to manufacture "their own."

Illustrating the difficulty of putting a stop to home brewing prohibition enforcement officers today pointed out that copper tubing, one of the most important material in the manufacture of a still, also is [illegible] a score or more of perfectly legitimate purposes, and that its sale cannot be stopped or even interfered with.

This is equally true of a number if not all of the other materials or ingredients used by the home brewer. Corn is a foodstuff, and one of the many used by distillers. So are potatoes, another basis upon which the whisker maker relies.

Even the malt and hops which scores of groceries and other stores have heaped upon their shelves are being legitimately used and the law must of necessity be framed so as to avoid interfering with the legal sale of this sort of stuff.

HOPE FOR SUCCESS.

In spite of these difficulties, however, Potter and his assistants are confident that they will be able to make an effective fight against the practice, which they say is spreading so rapidly that unless it is checked the whole purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act will be nullified.

Raids and arrests are to be made whenever there is evidence that the home-brewing in violation of law is being carried on, even if the courts fail to hold the prisoners.

It was pointed out that the attitude of many courts toward violations of the liquor laws was one of the main obstacles the enforcement agents had to overcome at the beginning of prohibition, but that this has altered tremendously of late, and that convictions are growing in number.

Party Leaders to Back Prohibition Officials

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 14.—That party leaders are backing the government's new prohibition enforcement program, a feature of which will be a "house cleansing" of some of the enforcement offices in "wet" strongholds, was the assurance of prohibition officials today.

Several of the leaders in Congress have been consulted and their consent gained to a very drastic overhauling of the dry law machines in many States, some of the centres of the distillery interests and main territory of bonded warehouses.

Commissioner Haynes objected to many of the present officials supervising enforcement is that they have been too slow to adopt methods suggested by him in instructions which have been in effect for some time.

Some of them have been averse to making revolutionary changes in the systems set up by the old administration governing distribution of government permits to holders for legal withdrawals of non-beverage liquors.

Hunt Crew of Hub Boat Carrying Liquor

By Associated Press.

Sidney, N. S., Oct. 14.—Cape Breton police today were seeking the crew of the nine-ton Boston schooner Vagrant, who escaped when the vessel and its $15,000 liquor cargo were seized at Canarse Harbor by Prohibition Officer Bragg.

The liquor was reported to have been the property of a supercargo who fled with the crew. Police said it had been put on the vessel at St. Pierre for shipment to a point on the New Jersey coast.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE INDORSES MURPHY

John R. Murphy, the Good Government Association nominee, was overwhelmingly indorsed for Mayor of Boston at an executive meeting of the Boston League of Women Voters in the Garland School for Homemaking.

Two ballots, formal and informal, were taken by the women and resulted the same. Murphy received 47; Curley, 9; O'Connor, 2; Pelletier, 2; and Baxter, 2.

"Dry" Officials Warn Against "Coroner Cocktails"

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Prohibition officials issued a new warning today against public consumption of "bootleg" liquor. Most of the stuff being dispensed now merits the name of "Coroner Cocktails," the statement said.

"Less than 2 per cent. of the stuff now being peddled is real whiskey and gin," said J. W. Doran, chief of the chemical division of the prohibition office.

REPLY WRITTEN TO HARDING BY MRS. FRIED

Asks President if He Will Urge Armaments Be Reduced by Half

By Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Another chapter of the correspondence between President Harding and Miss Ella L. Freed, concerning the coming conference on limitation of armament, was made public today by "Miss Freed," who added that the President had misread her name, which really is Mrs. Ella L. Fried.

The President made public on Wednesday a letter, in response to one from her, in which he gave his first extended public outline of what he hoped to see achieved at the conference.

Mrs. Fried said she had written a reply, urging him to propose a reduction by one-half of present armaments. The letter read:

"I asked you what you meant by 'reasonable limitation.' You say you mean 'something practicable.' That is exactly the same thing you said before in other words. Synonyms are not definitions.

"Permit me to ask you whether you consider a reduction of the world's military burdens by one-half reasonable or practicable? If every one of the nations at the conference agrees to reduce its armament one-half, their relative strength would remain as great as before. That is clear, I hope.

"Then why not suggest one-half reduction? When that has been done, the women of the world will furnish you further suggestions as to what is reasonable and practicable."

Mrs. Fried, aged twenty-three, lives in Pittsburgh.

BOUCK WHITE'S DIVORCE NOW IN EFFECT

Bouck White, one-time pastor of the Church of the Social Revolution and chosen leader of the intellectual radicals, now a quiet householder and amateur potter in Malden, today wrote "Finis" to his stormy war-time romance, for today the annulment of the marriage to Andree Emilie Simon White became effective.

Mrs. White, a twenty-year-old French girl, obtained her decree from the middle aged prophet of social reform on the ground that he deceived her as to his political, social and religious convictions.

Their separation was the climax to a brief matrimonial career that was full of unpleasant incidents.

At one time the country people of the up-State New York village where the Whites lived gave him a flogging because of his alleged mistreatment of his bride.

White smiled in rather weary fashion when his war-time wooing, three-months' honeymoon and quickly-fading romance was mentioned.

He spoke feelingly of divorce as a wonderful institution in cases of unhappily married persons and flushed slightly when his former wife's name was directly mentioned.

Bouck White, who for years preached from the pulpit of revolution and tried to mould the minds of men toward a reorganization of society, is today moulding little figures of clay, and wearing the peasant's smock which is the conventional garb of sculptors.

Lloyd George Says He Lived on $3.75 a Week

BRIBERY, HUGS AND KISSES IN EVIDENCE

and that Mrs. Murphy was scantily clad.

That she saw Rose minus hat, coat and vest in the apartment with Mrs. Murphy on another occasion when Mrs. Murphy was partly undressed. That she waited a half an hour and then left Rose and Mrs. Murphy there alone.

That Rose had frequently visited Mrs. Murphy's apartments in Chiswick road, Brighton, during the absence of Murphy in 1911 and there saw them kiss and hug. Mrs. Murphy the while scantily clad.

That Mr. Rose had influenced Mrs. Murphy to have improper relations with business associates in order to better his relations with business associates.

"LOOK OUT FOR MYSELF."

Describing how Mrs. Paul had given the statements from which he built the affidavit, Santosuosso declared that Mrs. Paul had smiled as she added in parenthesis that Mrs. Murphy was never very fully clad.

Santosuosso then described meeting Mrs. Paul in Boston after the signing of the affidavit and telling her that "they were after him hot in New York."

Mrs. Paul then expressed her dislike for the proceedings and then added, according to Santosuosso said: "You know Rose has lots of money and I've got to look out for myself."

To his question as to whether or not she was going to perjure herself, Santosuosso said she replied: "Oh, no, but I'm alone in the world and I've got to look out for myself."

REFUSED TO SETTLE.

Santosuosso denied that he had ever promised Mrs. Paul she would be taken care of if she stood pat on her affidavit, or that he had suggested to her that she act as housekeeper for Murphy until the beginning of the trial.

He declared that Stoneman had asked him what Murphy would take in settlement and that he replied there was "nothing doing" and that they would try the case fairly in open court.

SUSPECTED "FRAME-UP."

Santosuosso declared that in an interview with Stoneman, Rose's counsel had said in effect that "Eddie has been indiscreet, but he insists he has not had improper relations with Mrs. Murphy since her marriage."

Santosuosso created a ripple of excitement when he said that Stoneman had mentioned to him the fact that much had been said of blackmail in the Tufts case but that was then on trial, and that he had replied he had nothing to be afraid of and intended to go ahead with the case.

Cross examined by Attorney John E. Hannigan he was asked:

"You knew Rose was in the army?"

"I knew he was trying to dodge the draft," he replied, "and I thought he succeeded."

David Stoneman, counsel for Rose, preceding Santosuosso, testified that he suspected a "frame-up" from the first.

He declared he had advised Rose to fight Murphy's $100,000 alienation suit to the last ditch.

The court room was crowded with men and a long line of men stretched far down into the corridor. Women were in the minority, hardly one to every ten men being present.

Stoneman's testimony revealed, too, that Murphy's suspicion of improper relations between his wife and Rose was when he checked up what he considered heavy telephone bills and found many of the extra calls were to Rose.

CHARGED A "FRAME-UP."

Reiterating his charges of a frame-up, Stoneman told how on July 7, when he was called into the case as counsel for Rose, he had had a conversation with Joseph Santosuosso, attorney for Murphy, in which Santosuosso had stated that Murphy had learned that Mrs. Murphy had had improper relations with Rose.

"Santosuosso told me," Stoneman testified, "that Mrs. Murphy, when confronted with the telephone evidence, that she had had improper relations with Mr. Rose shook their marriage."

"I asked Santosuosso if he knew Mrs. Murphy before her marriage, and when he replied in the affirmative I asked him if the case didn't seem strange to him."

"I said to him," testified Stoneman, "that case has all the earmarks of a frame-up. And knowing what you do of Mrs. Murphy's past, I should think you would think so, too."

CONVINCED OF INNOCENCE.

Stoneman then testified that he had assured Santosuosso that he would talk with Rose and, if convinced that Rose had had illicit relations, as charged, he would advise him to settle.

After conferring with Rose, however, he declared, he was convinced of Rose's innocence, and served notice on the other side that they would fight the case through to a finish.

Stoneman testified that on August 27, with Murphy and Attorney Maurice Tobey he went to New York and obtained from Mrs. May Paul a repudiation of her previous affidavit in which she said she knew of improper relations on the part of Mrs. Murphy and the correspondent.

MORE LAWYERS FACE ALLEN'S CHARGES

Ready to Bring Disbarment Proceedings Against Mishawum Attorneys

Attorney-General Allen's petition for the disbarment of Attorney Harry E. Levenson for alleged unprofessional conduct was said today to be the forerunner of a series of petitions from Allen's office for the disbarment of other Boston lawyers who were implicated in the $100,000 "shake-down" of film magnates as a result of the orgy at Mishawum Manor.

Another petition is hourly expected. There was every indication today that the bill of information against District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier will be filed by Attorney General Allen in the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court on Monday or Tuesday at the latest.

The full Supreme Court will assemble on Monday. According to reports at the State House, Attorney General Allen is anxious to give the public the Pelletier charges as early as possible. They are said to be virtually completed.

It was thought in legal circles that the Pelletier specifications would be submitted to the court on Tuesday, the return day for the petitions of the Boston Bar Association for the disbarment of Attorneys Daniel H. Coakley, Daniel V. McIsaac and William J. Corcoran.

On that day a date will be fixed for trial of the disbarment cases. The respondents will have the right to file answers, if they so elect. Pelletier is expected to issue another and longer statement very soon.

Levenson is charged with misconduct in connection with the David H. Brand and the International Service Company cases and with having declared clients and charged them extortionate fees.

MISSING LONDON SOCIETY GIRL IS DISCOVERED ILL IN WOODS

WANDERED ABOUT FOR 3 DAYS

London, Oct. 14.—Mystery still surrounds the case of Miss Pamela Beckett, a young society woman of this city, who was discovered yesterday almost helpless in Cuffley Woods, after she had been missing for three days.

Apparently she wandered for nearly twenty miles before being found. She was trying to reach a house in Barnet, where until about a year ago her family lived. She was within four miles of Barnet when discovered.

A motorcyclist named Hughes had dismounted from his machine and was walking through Cuffley Woods in search of berries when he saw the girl lying on the ground, shivering. He was unaware of the girl's identity, but he offered assistance. She replied she was "all right" and said she wished only to be left alone.

A local resident who happened along with Hughes renewed the proffer of help, declaring they must tell the police if it was refused, as it was obvious she was unfit to be left alone. She seemed unconcerned and repeated her wish not to be disturbed.

They finally persuaded her to take a seat in Hughes' side car and she was taken to a local inn, and placed in charge of the landlady.

The girl said she had eaten nothing since she left home Monday afternoon, and had been walking about ever since she had vanished. She refused to tell where she had been, and, although she said her name was Beckett, she declined to say where she lived or to allow word to be sent to friends.

Later Hughes learned of the girl's disappearance from a newspaper, and communicated with the police. Relatives of Miss Beckett went to the inn where she had been taken, and brought her to her home in the city.

GIRL BEATEN AND ROBBED ON LONELY ROAD

Police Seek Stranger Who Attacked Miss Edna Battles Near Dover, N. H.

Boston police today joined in the search for a young man who enticed Miss Edna Battles of Montpelier, Vt., into a lonely country road near Dover, N. H., Tuesday night, attacked and beat her and robbed her of a handbag containing $50.

According to the story told by the girl to the Dover police, she was on her way to Concord, N. H., where she expected to get work, and was waiting on the platform of the Boston & Maine station at Dover when the young man accosted her. They talked for a time and she agreed to take a short walk with him while waiting for the train.

In a lonely road half a mile away she says he attacked her, but she fought him off and fled, leaving her handbag behind.

Mother Deeds Baby to Florida Woman; Act Called Illegal

By Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 14.—A warranty deed, formally transferring ownership of a small boy from one woman to another, has been placed on record here. The deed shows that the transaction took place last January. In Hardin County, Texas, Mrs. Nellie Davis deeding her three-months-old son to Mrs. Norma L. Wilson. Mrs. Wilson recently moved to Tampa and had the deed recorded to prove her ownership.

Court House officials declare that, in their opinion, the deed is illegal, in that it is unfair to the child and deprives him of the rights of heritage as provided in papers of adoption.

WORKMAN DIES WHEN STAGING FALLS 3 FLOORS

Companion Escapes by Sliding Down Rope as Tremont St. Structure Falls

One man was instantly killed and a second painfully injured today, when a staging in front of Nos. 430 to 432 Tremont street collapsed, precipitating them three stories to the sidewalk.

Scores of horror-stricken men and women saw the accident, and Frank Bredo of No. 24 Clarendon street fainted from fright.

The casualties:

Joseph Allen, thirty-five years old, of Pembroke street and Shawmut avenue, South End, instantly killed.

Antonio Mada, thirty-five years old, No. 1858 Shawmut avenue, saved his life by sliding down a rope after the staging gave way, but sustained cuts, bruises and shock. Taken to the City Hospital and later home.

Frank Bredo, forty-three years old, collapsed from fright and was taken to the City Hospital.

Allen and Mada had been at work on the staging all forenoon. It parted in the middle, for some undetermined reason, and Mada's wild shout of fear was the only warning to people on the sidewalk below.

Mada's presence of mind undoubtedly saved his life. As the platform gave way under him he leaped clear and grasped a swinging rope, sliding to the ground. Allen's body was removed to the Southern Mortuary.

BOSTON GIRL HELD FOR STORE THEFT IN LYNN

Rose Baer, a pretty young woman of Harrison avenue, Boston, was arraigned in Lynn Court today charged with shoplifting. The young woman was recently arrested on a similar complaint in a Boston shop, it being charged that she and a young man were "working" the department stores together. Her case was continued for two weeks today, her attorney being unable to be present. Lynn police inspectors stated that she was in possession of a Boston bag and a big traveling bag when they arrested her in a store on Market street.

BRAINTREE'S "GHOST" MYSTERY SOLVED

Braintree's "ghost" mystery is solved!

Several Braintree youths have admitted they conceived the hoax. They got away with it the other night when one of the party "swiped" one of ma's bed sheets and made merry by tripping hitherto "ever hear" stones in the Washington street cemetery while 150 awe-stricken natives looked on. The ghost disappeared.

SOUTH BOSTON GIRL SHOT BY HER FATHER

Man Sought by Police Made Angry by Daughter's Complaint to Officers

Jennie Drukinalli, twenty-three years old, of No. 3 Barnard place, South Boston, was lying near death in the City Hospital today with three bullet wounds in her head, while the police were searching for Raffale Drukinalli, her father, charged with inflicting the wounds.

Ten days ago the father was arrested on complaint of the daughter, who preferred a serious accusation against him, telling the police that ever since she came to this country with her parents, three brothers and a sister, eight months ago from their home in Italy, Raffale has been annoying her with his attentions.

He forced open a window on the lower floor of the house early today and climbed into the kitchen. Then he crept upstairs to the room occupied by Jennie, only to find she was not there.

Two pictures of the girl stood on the bureau together with a few of her trinkets. The furious father turned these and then continued his search for his daughter.

His movements aroused the mother and daughter, who had been sleeping together in a lower room, and Jennie came out into the hall just as her father started down the stairs. She saw him and ran screaming.

He drew a revolver and began blazing away at her, she told the police. He fired three shots, the first of which missed. The other two struck her in the head. Then as she lay on the floor, moaning, he came closer to her and fired a fourth shot, which struck a glancing blow on the side of the girl's head.

Then Raffale carefully replaced the revolver and fled the way he had entered.

BOARD OF FIVE TO ACT ON WAR DEBT

Harding Approves of Commission Instead of One Man and Asks for Speed

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 14.—The terms and conditions under which Europe will undertake to repay the United States the $11,000,000,000 borrowed during the war period will be determined by a commission of five men appointed by the President.

This became assured today when, in the face of overwhelming congressional opposition, the administration decided to accept defeat on the Fenrose bill, which would have concentrated power of settlement in the Secretary of the Treasury alone.

After a conference at the White House, President Harding informed Republican Leader Mondell that the administration would agree to the discarding of the Penrose bill and would get behind the new bill to be brought in by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The new measure will empower the President to appoint a commission of five, the chairman of which is to be the secretary of the treasury, to arrange the terms of settlement. The executive will not be limited in his selection except in the case of the treasury head.

President Harding informed Mondell of the administration's desire that the new bill be rushed to completion, reported out and passed as soon as possible.

President Harding is anxious for the passage of the bill before Nov. 15.

He wants the administration to be in a position to arrange for settlement of the allied indebtedness if consideration of this question is forced upon the United States by the allied statesmen.

500 TROOPS IN LONDON ESCORT OF PERSHING

London, Oct. 14.—Five hundred picked American troops, of all branches, arrived here today from the Rhine to act as an honorary escort to General Pershing when the grave of Britain's unknown warriors in Westminster Abbey is decorated on Monday with the Congressional Medal for Valor. The soldiers are from the American army of Occupation and came to London by way of Ostend, Belgium. A dinner will be given to General Pershing at the Carlton Hotel Monday night, with the British government as host.

Girl Calls for "Birth Strike" to Cut Off Nations' Supply of "Cannon Fodder"

DEFEND AND DENOUNCE BIRTH STRIKE

Miss Dorothy Kent Manners, left, advocate of reducing excess population, and Mrs. E. P. Adams, who is "dead agin" the whole idea.

One Fine Son Living Worth Three or Four Dead, Says Miss Manners

"Women in the United States and throughout the world will be urged to declare a virtual birth strike to conserve the world's food supply, and limit populations until there is world wide economic readjustment. Limitation of the birth rate, along with limitation of armament, will be asked."—News Dispatch.

By HAZEL CANNING

Boston women are divided on the advisability of a "birth strike." The proposal that "women in the United States declare a birth strike, to conserve the world's food supply," has reached here as preliminary propaganda of the disarmament conference, soon to start in Washington.

"Limitation of birth rate, along with limitation of armament, will be asked of the leading nations of the world," is the announcement: Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont, wife of the financier; Major General John F. Ryan, and Mrs. Willard Straight, daughter of the late William C. Whitney, will be members of the birth control conference of the disarmament conference. Now these ladies—and gentleman, may be convinced that the excess population, struggling for a place, which leads to wars and the killing of the excess, but can't make many women in Boston agree.

FAVORS BIRTH STRIKE.

Of four consulted, only one—Miss Dorothy Kent Manners, a member of the ..Professional Women's Club, came out good and strong for a fine, new fashioned birth strike. All the rest, Mrs. Wenona Osborne Pinkham, of the Boston League of Women Voters; Mrs. Ethel Johnson, assistant commissioner of labor for Massachusetts, and Dean Alice Robertson, of the Boston University School of Religious Education, were "dead agin" a birth strike. All the ladies had their reasons for, and against. Miss Manners first of all.

"Really," began Miss Manners, "I think a birth strike would be scientific, sensible, reasonable and a proper means of alleviating conditions which lead to war. That is, if ever you could get the women of the world to consent. To much cheap, human life, as the historians tell us, has caused many a war. Population teemed, and 'cannon fodder' was plentiful. We know that, in many countries, crowding population, has given reasons for war.

"Both the old territories were too small, and the population was too numerous. War followed, and, after the war, perhaps, there was no need for new lands. For war and its battles had killed off the ambitious men who had stretched out their arms to new boundaries.

"One thing, pre-eminently, seems to me necessary. That is, to stop war by taking all measures possible to stop it. To my way of thinking, one fine son, well trained, and spared from useless death in war, is worth three or four sons, less fine, sacrificed by overcrowding population, to be cannon fodder in new wars of territory. Therefore, say I, a birth strike, by all means, if by that, we can save what we have of precious life and do away with the curse of modern battle."

MOTHER IS OPPOSED.

Now that's Miss Manners' opinion. In answer to her, Mrs. E. P. Adams of Milton, who has six fine sons, speaks out in accents engaged. Mrs. Adams is the mother of a veteran of the World War, she is one of the Board of Visitors to the Children's Consumptive Hospital, of Milton, and she's a typical American mother.

"Such doctrine," says Mrs. Adams, "seems to me far-fetched and extravagant. When I hear that those learned disarmament gentry, in Washington, will favor reduction of births, to stop wars, I think they are approaching the problem from the wrong side. Education—plenty of it —will stop war. True Christianity will stop war. Science, better applied, so that the land yields twice what it now does, will supply enough food so that the world may be fed, though mothers give to the world more sons than a puny one or two.

"As a matter of fact, and of history, I marvel at the suggestion that we, who have large families, had better have stopped short, to prevent wars from over-crowding.

"SUICIDAL IN INTENT."

"I wonder if these wise people do not remember that, in the history of genius so often the great son of the family was the mother's seventh or tenth or twelfth child. We may become so wise that, radially, we die. I think any artificial agreement to reduce the birth rate, to stop wars, is suicidal in intent and in result. Wars should be stopped, but we should take some more certain way to stop them than this, which is just guess work, and pure essence of conjecture."

"UNFOUNDED, UNREASONABLE."

Dean Alice Robertson, of the Boston University School of Religious Education, did not favor the proposal to stop wars by reducing the birth rate. "There are other ways of stopping wars than by telling John Smith that he has too many sons," said she. "One way is for nations to forget to be selfish. The selfishness of great nations has caused more wars than many sons to a family. I think this proposal of the disarmament people is unfounded and unreasonable."

To which Mrs. Wenona Osborne Pinkham of the Boston League of Women Voters, amended her opinion. "I certainly am in favor of scientific birth control," said she. "But I think that birth control and the prevention of war are by no means related. If over population leads to war, the thing to do would be to regulate the distribution of the earth's population, rather than reduce the population.

"We have continents, almost, of waste land yet, waiting for the extra sons of large families to reclaim them. In my opinion no birth strike, so called, would ever stop wars. I believe that the disarmament folks, in this instance, are quite in error."

SOMERVILLE WORLD WAR VETERAN IS MISSING

Mrs. Catherine Wells, of No. 8 West street, West Somerville, has asked authorities to aid her in locating her son, Harold G., Wells, twenty-four years old, who disappeared October 1. According to the mother, Wells left home on that day with about $100, for Boston to buy a suit of clothes. Wells is a veteran of the World War and with his wife and infant son made his home with his mother.

BOSTON JEWRY TO CELEBRATE TENT FEAST

Seven and Nine-Day Observance of Tabernacles Festival to Begin Sunday

Special services will be held in all Jewish synagogues in Greater Boston for nine days beginning next Sunday in celebration of the Feast of the Tabernacles. Orthodox Jews will celebrate it by living for seven days in tents instead of in their homes.

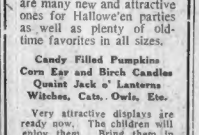

The festival is a combination of a period of harvest rejoicing and a celebration of the time when the Jews lived in booths or temporary dwellings following their exodus from Egypt.

The feast opens Sunday evening with special services, and continues daily until the eighth day, which is called the Festival of Conclusion. On the day following the prescribed cycle of reading of scripture for the year is concluded, and each member of the congregation is requested to read part of the concluding passage of scripture.

During the first seven days of the feast, Orthodox Jews will obey the Biblical command literally, and dwell in temporary dwellings, usually tents set up in backyards or on roofs. In these, "Succoth," as they are called, they will offer their daily prayer and partake of meals.

At the Temple Adath Israel on Commonwealth avenue, 500 children will take part in the service Sunday afternoon. They will carry to the altar various fruits of the field, which will be placed in a booth or Succoth. After the service they will be distributed to the poor children.

ELSIE TO LEAVE FOR HALIFAX SATURDAY

America's Entry in Fisher Race Will Occupy Pier Used for Esperanto

Gloucester, Oct. 14.—The fishing schooner Elsie, America's entry in the International Fishermen's Trophy races scheduled for October 22, will leave tomorrow for Halifax, Nova Scotia.

She will occupy the same pier used for the Esperanto, America's victorious entry in the international races a year ago, and the work of getting her ship-shape for the opening gun will begin at once.

One hour after the Elsie, skippered by Captain Marty Welch, had romped home wiel ahead of the field in the final American elimination race, Captain Welch had received a telegram of congratulation from the Nova Scotian racing committee and the offer of the usual courtesies.

Superiority in seamanship, fleetness in reaching, running and beating figured in the victory of the Elsie, which finished seven minutes ahead of her nearest rival.

PERFORMANCE PRAISED.

The trophy was won last Fall by Captain Marty Welch of the Esperanto in a race with the Canadian schooner Delawana.

From every angle of seamanship the performances of the Elsie easily drew the commendations of the hardy mariners who know schooners and have sailed them for years. Like an automobile responding to the slightest touch of the wheel, so did the Elsie respond to the gnarled hand of Captain Marty Welch as he sent her first to starboard and then to port, increasing at each movement his advance over his nearest competitor.

WELCH TO RACE CANADIAN.

Through some good fortune, considered by some as already having the trophy remain in the hands of Gloucester's fisheries, Captain Welch will pit his seamanship again against the Canadian seamen at Halifax.

The competing schooners in yesterday's race were the Elsie, Arthur James, Ralph Brown, Phillip F. Manta and the Elsie G. Silva.

Hundreds of small craft, sailing vessels and steam yachts, many come from as far away as Portland, followed the racers over the forty-mile course, and saw the whole race, while those ashore could only see ten miles of it.

Half way down the shore on the first five miles, the James came ahead of the Elsie, passed to leeward, and rounded the buoy slightly in the lead.

ELSIE TAKES LEAD.

It was a fair run down to the buoy, and the schooners kept pretty well together until the mark was turned, when the Elsie, cutting down the distance between her and the James, shot ahead and from that time on never had any difficulty in making it apparent to those who followed the race that she could do other than win.

IRISH PARLEY IS SOLVING TRUCE PROBLEM

No Hitch in Peace Negotiations, but London Proceedings Will Be Prolonged

London, Oct. 14.—(By the Associated Press)—The conference of Sinn Fein leaders and members of the British Cabinet convened at 11 o'clock this morning in Premier Lloyd George's official residence in Downing street, with the view of reaching an agreement as to a basis for a settlement of the Irish question, and adjourned at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon until 2.30 p. m. Monday.

While the conference was in session today, Desmond Fitzgerald, Sinn Fein Minister of Propaganda, said that no hitch in the negotiations thus far had occurred and that the Sinn Fein delegates expected prolonged proceedings.

All the Irish representatives are members of the committees to which specific subjects have been submitted, and these committees have been conferring with different members of the British Cabinet and government experts.

A general agreement, except on some points of detail, has been reached on the truce question by the committee dealing with it. Commandant Barry, the Irish Republican liaison officer for Munster, where a break of the truce has occurred, has been summoned to London for consultation with the Irish delegates.

The Sinn Fein representatives have formulated complaints as to conditions in the internment camps, especially that on Spike Island in Cork harbor, where allegations of harsh treatment have been made against British troops.

These complaints have been referred to General Sir Nevil Macready, commander of the British forces in Ireland, who is investigating them.

WEST END GIRL MISSING ONE MONTH

Father Asks Police Aid in Hunt for Theresa Ferrandi, 18 Years Old

A new missing girl mystery came to the attention of the police today when Graziosa Ferrandi of No. 40 Cambridge street, asked assistance in finding his eighteen-year-old daughter Theresa.

The girl disappeared a month ago, taking most of her clothing with her, according to her father.

He said the girl is still in Boston and has been seen since in Orient Heights and also on Bulfinch street. The police are preparing to question several young men and women who knew the girl well.

Miss Babette Karger, Miss Virginia Hurlbut, Miss Ruth Martin, Miss Evelyn Stilling, Miss Marguerite Nettleton and Miss Jane Terrill will act as captains of teams of four juniors and seniors who will sell the candy during the day.

These girls, wearing caps with gold and blue head bands, include: Miss Edith Briscoe, Miss Jean Murdoch, Miss Eleanor Carroll, Miss Rebecca Counts, Miss Ann Driscol, Miss Mary Lou Eckles, Miss Kathleen Holladay, Miss May Honniss, Miss Ruth Gordon, Miss Ruth Martin and Miss Alice Murtfeldt.

SLAIN BOOTLEGGER MADE $500,000 IN "HOOTCH"

New York, Oct. 14.—Joseph Viserti, alias Joseph Peppe, proprietor of a roadhouse at Fordham road and Southern Boulevard, the Bronx, who is reported to have made $500,000 in bootleg operations, was killed in a pistol duel that began in front of a coffee house at No. 367 Broome street and ended inside with the slaying by Peppe of Louis Rango, a jewelry salesman. Rango was sitting at a table sipping coffee when Peppe ran into the place, pistol in hand, and was caught between the fire of the opposing gunmen.

The slaying of Peppe, who was well known to the police, as he had been arrested thrice for murder, on one of which occasions he was sent to prison, but pardoned subsequently by Governor Whitman, is thought to have been due to a belief among his henchmen that he had "squealed." On the occasion of Peppe's last arrest for murder, which was October 3, he made a long statement for Inspector John D. Coughlin, the nature of which could not be ascertained.

Persons in the neighborhood where the slaying occurred, which has been the scene of other bootleg murders during the last year, openly asserted Peppe might be termed a king, if there were such a person among the bootleggers. Before prohibition, they pointed out, he had little or nothing. Yesterday he drove up in front of the coffee house in a Mercer sedan, as he had done on many occasions before. Then he displayed an unusual amount of jewelry.

When he was arraigned October 3 on a speeding charge he wore a ring the diamond in which was reported to be worth $10,000.

FALL RIVER MILLS TO PROTEST TAXES

Fall River, Oct. 14.—Several communications have been sent to the assessors by a number of mill corporations indicating the fact the owners of the mills will seek an abatement of taxes. Last year a number of manufacturers paid their taxes under protest. They claim that valuations are too high.

LANDLADY ACCUSES LODGER OF STABBING HER

Police are searching for Charles Harris, twenty-five, a lodger at No. 1045 Tremont street, Roxbury, who stabbed his landlady, Mrs. Alma Ridgley, in the back with a knife, robbed her of $4, and then made his escape. Police say the two had an argument because Harris was two months in arrears on his rent.

PRETTY BABY

There is a Perfect Baby. You know that. Whose is it? Where is it? The Boston Daily Advertiser wishes to start the little darling off with a bank deposit of One Hundred Dollars. Got a picture? See the Daily Advertiser.

NOW IS THE TIME to buy DIAMONDS
at prices that may not recur for years
Engagement Rings
$75, $100, $150 to $1000

ON account of very unusual conditions in the diamond market we have been able to purchase for cash large quantities of fine blue white perfect cut diamonds at very low prices and are giving our customers the benefit of such purchases.

Our judgment, based on over 82 years of experience, is that prices will be higher within a very short time and decidedly higher in 1922. Take advantage of existing conditions and BUY NOW.

The Magic Number of Our Anniversary

FIFTY-SIX years ago The Shepard Stores opened to the public in the same location now occupied, but with the merest fraction of the present floor space.

THIS month we are celebrating these 56 years of service with a tremendous series of unprecedented sales of which this one today is a big part.

THE numb fifty-six which figures in every price in this page represents a definite and decided reaction.

THE merchandise is new, seasonable and wholly desirable

THEonly reason in the world that it is offered at far under price is because October is our Anniversary Month and 56 is the number of years we have been building up the service we now offer you.

NAME OF CAR 17 IS SUGGESTED BY POEM

Contestants Should Now Give Some Thought to Essay as Test Grows Older

Car Number Seventeen, in the Boston American's $1,500 Name-this-Auto Test.

When the name comes to you it may recall a line from one of Goldsmith's poems in which the words "sweet," "loveliest" and "plain" occur.

But you will not need to emulate Mr. Silas Wagg. If you do not know a line of poetry, and have not a poet among your acquaintances, there are many ways to get the name of today's car. Different methods have been suggested here.

Everybody knows the rules or has a copy of them. We are "all set." The method of this $1,500 Test is understood by all.

Fifty pictures, of which seventeen have been printed. Thirty-three to come. Each illustration picturing an automobile.

Your business to name each car, writing the name on the proper line, and hold the pictures until No. 50 has appeared. Send then in in one parcel, each properly identified.

In addition to naming the automobiles, remember, each contestant is to write an essay, or letter, on the subject of "Safety on New England Streets and Boulevards." The essay is to be a helpful one. It must suggest some way in which the number of highway accidents may be reduced. A new method of warning. A new way of policing busy crossings. An innovation which will help the traffic officer. Something helpful for the pedestrian. Something beneficial for the driver.

Give some thought to the essay, as the Test grows older. It may be that many contestants will identify all fifty pictures. In that event, the essay will prove most important.

Tomorrow, No. 18.

ARCH PRESERVER SHOE SHOP

The ONLY place in Boston where WOMEN can obtain these shoes.

An Entirely New Realization

Of Comfort, Style, Service and Value is yours the instant you step into a pair of

ARCH PRESERVER SHOES

The only shoes built with an arched steel shank, anchored at both ends and individually fitted to the arches of your feet, providing a snug, easy, natural tread-base that can not sag or break down; a tread-base that supports your feet where they most need support, keeps them from "crowding forward," and so permanently eliminates all pressure and friction.

This entirely new principle of construction and method of fitting—besides correcting many foot evils—will permit you to wear a handsomer shoe with perfect comfort!

Will you let me show you the many New Fall Models now ready for Men and Women?

TO TEST HELIUM FOR AIRSHIP INFLATION

Washington, Oct. 14.—The first use of helium, non-inflammable gas, for inflation of an airship will be undertaken by the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics within a few days. A non-rigid airship of the "C" class will be inflated with helium from Fort Worth, Texas, at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station to determine the properties of the gas with relation to buoyancy, valve control and permeability of fabric.

DAWES ORDERED TO ACTIVE DUTY IN ARMY

Washington, Oct. 14.—Brigadier-General Dawes of the Reserve Corps, now serving as Director of the Budget, was ordered today to active duty in the army, beginning October 22 and continuing until November 17, in connection with the meetings to be held by Military Board of Allied Supply, on which he is the American member.

CHINESE DELEGATES TO PARLEY ARE ANNOUNCED

Washington, Oct. 14.—China will entrust her fortunes at the Far East Conference here next month to four principal delegates, three of whom are graduates of American universities. It was officially learned today that the Chinese delegation will consist of the following:

Dr. W. W. Yan, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Dr. S. K. Alfred Sze, Minister to the United States.

Dr. Willington Koo, Minister to Great Britain and former Minister to the United States.

Dr. W. H. Wang, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, and now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of China.

"THE OTHER LOBSTER" is done in Gouverneur Morris' best manner. There is not a better manner in America. All about a most attractive little widow of twenty-two, mistress of $5,000,000, and a worthy and fine-looking young chap with "only" a beggarly ten thousand a year. Buzzard's Bay, a Summer night, the moon, a table for two on the porch, and—the other lobster! Get this story, COMPLETE, with the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

UNNECESSARY!

In these little talks about the Boston American's Twenty-five Dollar Best Recipe Competition we have been admonishng the reader to:

Read the food advertisements!

On second thought, we are sure this was not necessary.

Every good housewife reads the food advertisements.

The point is that recipes submitted for consideration in the Weekly Best Recipe Competition must be accompanied by the sales-slip of some dealer whose advertisement you have seen in the Boston American. If he does not issue sales-slips, give his name.

Recipes must be mailed not later than Tuesday evening. The Best Recipe is printed every Monday, on the Magazine Page. Other prize-winning recipes on subsequent days.

Col. Forbes to Recommend One, Possibly Two, Veterans' Institutions Located Here

Colonel Charles R. Forbes, director-general of the United States Veterans' Bureau at Washington, announces that he will recommend to President Harding that at least one, and perhaps two of the government's new hospitals for disabled veterans of New England be located in Massachusetts and a government vocational university in Boston.

Colonel Forbes made the announcement to a Boston American reporter following completion of his first tour of inspection to the First District of the bureau, comprising Boston and the rest of New England.

WILL GO TO HARDING.

The colonel's recommendations will be submitted to the President on Monday.

The Boston American vigorously supported a bill before the last Congress for the appropriation of $6,400,000 for extension and reconstruction of old hospitals, and $12,000,000 for the building of new ones for disabled veterans.

The Boston American then insisted that two of the proposed new hospitals should be for the care of the disabled in New England, and that they should be located in Massachusetts as this State is centrally located to serve all New England.

This paper sent representatives to Washington to fight for the location of the two hospitals here. They submitted facts and figures to the Public Health Service, the director of the War Risk Insurance Bureau, and to the special commission of physicians appointed by President Harding to consider the question of location of all new hospitals.

DUANE CO-OPERATES.

The Boston American co-operated with Major James T. Duane, State commander of the American Legion, who appeared with this paper's representatives before Washington officials and commissions in support of the Boston American's demand for two new hospitals here.

Governor Cox, through representations of this paper, sent a special commissioner to Washington to support the Boston American in its advocacy of the new hospitals.

Colonel Forbes told a Boston American reporter that in his recommendation for at least one new hospital here, he will lay particular stress that it be for the treatment of former service men suffering from tuberculosis. It will be a five hundred-bed hospital of fireproof construction, he said, and the most modern type building.

CAPTURE TRIO RIFLING STORE ON FRIEND ST.

East Boston Youths Accused of Attempting to Crack Safe

A squad of officers from the Hanover and Joy street stations, with drawn guns, entered the E. J. Hickey wall paper store, No. 186 Friend street, and surprised three East Boston men, who, the police allege, had rifled a desk and were preparing to blow open a safe.

The men, arrested on charges of breaking and entering and attempted larceny, gave the following names and addresses: Joseph Capona, twenty-two years old, No. 8 Seaver street; Frederick Bemarti, twenty-one years old, No. 181 Everett street, and Samuel Ginda, twenty-four years old, No. 181 Webster street, all of East Boston.

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength.) Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, blasting sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

4,423 DRUNKS IN ROXBURY; 2,139 LAST YEAR

Big Gain In Law Violations in That District Shown by Court Report

Crime is increasing in Roxbury, the records of the Municipal Court, as given out today by Clerk Maurice W. O'Connell, show. And the court ranks second in criminal business in Boston.

This year 14,396 cases have been handled, against 11,045 last year. Four thousand, four hundred and twenty-three drunks faced the court this year. The record last year was 2,139. There were 61 robberies this year, while last year 28 were recorded. Larceny, too, showed an increase, with 548 cases against 491.

Violations of the liquor law largely increased, the records showing 367 cases this year. Last year there were only 102.

And there were 703 search warrants for liquor issued, against 11 last year.

Preference in Postal Service for Persons With War Record

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 14.—President Harding today took steps to make the way easier for those who served in the World War to secure appointment in the postal service.

The President issued an executive order, providing that five points shall be added to the earning of all young men and women who had war service, and who are now seeking presidential postal appointments. The orders also waives all age limits for these persons, and permits the time they spent in service to be counted in their rating as "business experience."

PEACE MOVE BY HOUSE MAKES CAPITAL BUZZ

Left His Card at Wilson's House Two Years After Famous Split

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 14. — Political Washington was abuzz with speculation today over what is generally regarded as a conciliatory move on the part of Colonel E. M. House to "make up" with Woodrow Wilson.

The first step in renewing their relations has been taken by the colonel. Quietly and with his usual lack of ostentation, the Texan drove to the Wilson home in S street, deposited his card with the doorman, and drove away. It is the first time since the famous split at Paris, more than two years ago, that there has been any outward sign of contact between the two men.

Col. House's visits to Washington since his break with Wilson at Paris have been few and far between. On the very occasions when he has come to Washington he has not visited his former friend and so far as is known there have been no interchanges between the two men who were formerly so intimate. Col. House's visit to Washington on this occasion was as the guest of a Philadelphia publisher for whom he is writing a series of articles.

What the next move will be if any from this apparent effort to patch up the estents cordiale is awaited in Washington with absorbing interest.

SOUTHERN CROSS NEAR RECORD ON FIRST TRIP

Rio Janeiro, Oct. 14.—The Munson liner Southern Cross arrived here from New York yesterday on her maiden voyage. Her time was eleven days seventeen hours and twelve minutes, which fell short of the record made by the steamship American Legion by approximately sixteen hours. A reception and dance for the American colony and social leaders here was given on board the vessel.

"My Little Girl Had a Severe Cough" Says Mentho-Laxene Quickly Relieved Her

MOTHERS! MOTHERS! If only you could know as thousands of mothers do know, that Mentho-Laxene Home-Made Cough Syrup, is the best, cheapest, purest and quickest acting medicine ever offered, you would not be so worried when your children catch cold,—for colds often develop into serious ills, such as pneumonia, bronchitis, croup, etc.

At the first sign of a cold, give this pleasant, pure syrup, and your fears will be needless. It is antiseptic; it is demulcent; it allays irritation, disperses inflammation, and loosens the secretions promptly. Mrs. H. A. Fales, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: "My little girl had a severe cough which it seemed I could not cure. Was afraid it would turn into pneumonia. I thought I would try Mentho-Laxene, and can say it relieved her of the cough, so that she sleeps all night without complaining at all." Myriads of mothers have had similar experience. Your druggist has it. A small bottle makes a pint, mixed with sugar syrup.—Adv.

MILITIARY SERVICE FOR ARLINGTON WAR VETERAN

The funeral of Private Michael A. Marrigan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Marrigan of No. 102 Massachusetts avenue, East Arlington, who was killed in the war in 1918, was held today from St. Agnes' church, East Arlington. Flags on public staffs in Arlington were floated at half-mast during the funeral. Arlington Post, American Legion, provided an escort and men from the post constituted a firing squad at the grave in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington. Marrigan was a member of Company H, 305th Infantry.

TIME WILL CURE EVILS OF LAW, HAPGOOD SAYS

Writer Sees Greatest Menace in Contempt of Principles by Men Higher Up

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

(Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.)

Washington, Oct. 14.—History has its uses. When we become discouraged over the way things are going we can remember that thinkers of all time have been prone to see the end of civilization. It was a long time ago that Montaigne wrote this: "In viewing these intestine and civil broils of ours, who doth not exclaim that this world's vast frame is near unto a dissolution, and that the day of judgment is ready to fall on us?"

The dissolution and the judgment have not yet come, in spite of Jeremiah and me and all other prophets who view with alarm. There is a good while to wait yet, according to the papers read at the recent meeting of men of science at Edinburgh.

Lord Rayleigh offers the world six thousand million years, instead of Kelvin's twenty million, for life to trifle away its time on the planet.

Even the law may be more encouraging in much less than six thousand million years. It is the latest thought emanating from the Solicitor General of the United States that makes one think a good part of this time may be needed.

Mr. Beck writes to the new Republic, trying to explain away his tolerant remarks about mob law, as long as it is turned against radicals.

Not to stop over the gentle treatment of the Italian equivalent of the Ku Klux Klan, let us notice what this high legal officer of the government thinks of law in this country.

Most of us, of course, only say we believe in the reign of law.

As a fact we believe in it only when it goes the way we want it to. But it seems a little different if the active head of Federal justice takes the same view.

Regarding a notorious case in which it is admitted by both sides that a most important witness committed perjury, Mr. Beck says:

"I confess my inability to sit in judgment on a result in which twelve jurymen, a trial judge, a supreme court, and a governor of a State alike concurred."

It would be difficult to crowd more ignorance and misrepresentation into one sentence.

The perjury, procured by the prosecution, was confessed after the jury had nothing more to do with the case. The Supreme Court of the State expressed fully the point that technical limitations prevented it from taking up the case after the perjury was discovered.

The trial justice has made a public statement that the situation in which a man, whether good or wicked, is denied a retrial after subornation of perjury by the prosecuting attorney has been admitted, is a public disgrace.

As for the Governor, his conduct is his affair. Presumably he feels the same as Mr. Beck seems to feel, that if one of those bad fellows that we are excited about is convicted of murder by perjured testimony, so much the better. France felt that way about the Dreyfus case until Zola was able to reach the public conscience.

President Wilson had the case fully investigated by the appropriate Federal body, and then, as he could not act himself, he telegraphed the Governor urging him to act.

LLOYD GEORGE WILL COME TO WASHINGTON

London, Oct. 14.—Premier Lloyd George has notified his colleagues he has definitely decided to attend the Washington conference on limitation of armaments, it was learned by the International News Service today. The premier has arranged with the Cunard Steamship Company to speed up the sailing of the Aquitania to get the British delegation to Washington by the opening of the parley.

HOLYOKE HOUSE AT HARVARD CONDEMNED

Conditions at Holyoke House, one of the Harvard dormitories, were scored today in a Crimson editorial. The place was pronounced unsuitable for living purposes. The editorial said:

"Like those in the yard, the dormitories off the yard have their champion of offensiveness. A very superficial examination will prove to the unprejudiced that Holyoke House deserves this title. The mere specification of the objectionable features of the hall fills three closely written pages. No one lives there if he can help it; the proctor who was last year assigned to the dormitory has left. Whether his charges can or will remain is yet to be seen."

SUFFERED SIX YEARS

Mrs. Stoll Tells Women How She Found Relief From Pain

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I suffered for six years with pain every month, had vomiting spells the first two days, and was unfit to do my work. I read in your little book about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took the medicine with satisfactory results. I am a married wife and recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and my daughters take it. You may publish these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. Louise Stoll, 609 W. York St., Philadelphia, Pa.

It is not natural for women to suffer as did Mrs. Stoll, and in nine cases out of ten it is caused by some displacement or derangement of the system which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes, because it acts as a natural restorative.

Every woman who is subject to cramps, headaches, nervous spells, backache or those dreadful bearing-down pains should profit by Mrs. Stoll's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is made from roots and herbs and contains no narcotics or harmful drugs.

GIRL SCOUTS TO SEEK BUDGET BANNER

Association for Promotion and Protection of Savings to Co-operate in Test

Girl Scouts of Greater Boston Council will be interested in an offer of a banner to the troop of the council having the largest percentage of members who present proof that they have lived up to a budget test during a period of six months.

The offer was made by the Association for the Promotion and Protection of Savings, which is to co-operate with the Girl Scouts, in a communication sent to the secretary of the Boston Council. Miss Eleanor W. Daggett by Miss S. Agnes Donham, director of the educational department of the association.

"Most Girl Scouts either earn money or have an allowance," said Miss Donham. "Every Girl Scout should make a plan for spending her money and follow it as closely as possible; should keep a record of money spent.

"Girl Scouts should be able to show that they know that they have a share in the cost of living: 1—in a family; 2—in a city or town; 3—in her State, and 4—in her country; and each scout should show five ways in which she helps support herself in the family.

"Girl Scouts taking the test should make a clothing budget for a year and endeavor to follow it as closely as possible. We will supply clothing budget sheets.

"Every Girl Scout enrolled for this test should pass in a record showing what she has spent her allowance, earnings, or other money, wisely during the previous six months. By these records she must prove that she has learned to save regularly."

BAR COMMITTEE PUTS OFF TUFTS HEARING

The special meeting of the grievance committee of Middlesex Bar Association to consider the disbarment of Nathan A. Tufts, deposed public prosecutor for the Northern District, which was to have been held tomorrow, was today postponed until Wednesday at 4 p. m. The announcement was made by Gilbert A. A. Fevey, chairman of the committee. The deliberations will not be open to the press.

TICKET SELLER FINED IN COLOR LINE CASE

William H. Murphy, ticket seller at the Tremont Theatre, appealed from a $25 fine in Municipal Court today on a charge of discrimination in refusing a first balcony ticket to Mrs. Anna H. White of No. 156 Worcester street. She is colored. The woman testified that Murphy gave her a second balcony ticket and told her they sold no first balcony to those of her color.

FAIR SUNDAY SEEN BY WEATHER FORECASTER

Sunday will probably be fair, according to Forecaster Smith, whose official prediction was as follows: "Not much change in temperature tonight and Saturday. Local frosts tonight. Moderate west to southwest winds. Sunday probably the same." Low temperatures were reported from the cranberry belt on the cape. It was 20 degrees at Marston's Mills.

DISCHARGED FACTORY WORKER SENTENCED

Louis Hadden of Albany told Judge Hayden in the Roxbury Court today that the reason he created a disturbance in a shoe factory on Vale street was because he had been discharged and that all he desired was a place to work. A three months' sentence in the House of Correction was given him and it was suspended.

Miss Eleanor F. Fish, North Shore society girl, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Fish of Swampscott, and Olivier G. Regnault, an official of the Guaranty Trust Company, Boston, have filed marriage intentions at City Hall.

The prospective bride is eighteen years old, and Regnault, twenty-four. She gave her residence as the Hotel Puritan and he the Harvard Club on Commonwealth avenue.

Miss Fish's father was formerly manager of the Lynn plant of the General Electric Company, and he is now foreign manager of the International General Electric Company, in France. Miss Fish was in Paris last June to purchase her wedding trousseau.

WOMEN AND MAN HURT WHEN CAR HITS AUTO

Mr. and Mrs. David Nelson of Shawsheen road, Billerica, and a woman guest were injured today when an automobile in which they were riding was struck broadside by a street car at Willow and Highland avenues, West Somerville. The front of the trolley car tore the automobile apart and hurled its occupants out. Mrs. Nelson was unconscious when taken from the wreckage.

BEAUREGARD'S CASE CONTINUED TO OCT. 25

The case of Orias H. Beauregard, former policeman, accused of assault on Mrs. Olga Kriesapoulous of Terrace street, Roxbury, before her marriage, was again continued when it came up in the Roxbury Court today. Francis M. Costello, called in as attorney for Beauregard after his resignation from the force, asked more time in which to prepare his case, and a continuance was granted until October 25.

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS OF GREATER BOSTON

Mrs. Storrow Materially Aids Girl Scouts' Drive

By BETTY ALDEN.

Mrs. James Storrow is a very busy woman these days. As her uniform suggests, she is intensely interested in the Girl Scout organization and has given unlimitedly of her time to it. She is also enrolled as a worker for the Simmons College drive.

Mrs. Storrow is very much "on the go," giving to "scout" and drive meetings alike of her tremendous vitality and magnetic personality. Wherever she goes, things begin to hum. Her brother, as almost everyone knows, is Thomas Mott Osborne, former warden of Sing Sing, who, like his sister, is a most interesting and convincing speaker.

At present the Storrows are at their country home in Lincoln, Mass., their Winter residence being at No. 417 Beacon street.

They say the unexpected always happens—and it did, as Miss Frances Webster is perfectly able to testify. Miss Webster's mother, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster of Chestnut Hill, is leading the Simmons College drive, and Frances has been helping to canvass subscriptions ever since the campaign for a million dollars began last Monday. The other evening a young worker for the drive in Stoneham asked Miss Webster to come to her town and address a few workers, giving suggestions for helping in the drive, and so on. When Miss Webster arrived in Stoneham she found that she was to speak in a good-sized theatre before an audience of several hundred women instead of in a private house before a few girls.

For a moment the young speaker was dumfounded, but being the true daughter of her mother, she rallied to the occasion and in a clear, brief speech she gave her listeners a complete and interesting history of Simmons College—just as she had been asked to do.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. McKee of No. 384 Commonwealth avenue were among the guests at the wedding on Wednesday of Josephine Gibson and Daniel W. Knowlton of New York. The ceremony was decidedly picturesque, taking place under a century old linden tree on the grounds of Longfield Farm, the home of Mrs. Charles D. Wolf Gibson at Bristol, Rhode Island.

The bride, who was attended by her niece, Frances de Wolf Hopkins, is a sister of the artist, Charles Dana Gibson of New York, and a great-granddaughter of the late Senator James de Wolf. Mr. Knowlton, who is a graduate of Harvard, is a lawyer.

FORD CRAWLS ON HIS KNEES IN COAL MINE

Inspects His Property in West Virginia and Forecasts New Methods

By International News Service.

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 14.—Expansion of the vast Ford interests into the comparatively new coal fields of West Virginia and introduction of new methods in handling labor and mining were forecast by the visit of Henry Ford and his son, Edsel, here.

After an inspection of his mines at Nuttallsburg, W. Va., where Ford descended into a coal mine for the first time in his life, the financier stopped in Huntington a short time for conference with West Virginia capitalists.

"I made the trip to my coal holdings in West Virginia to learn the exact working conditions of my miners," declared Ford.

"I was curious to see how coal was produced, how it looked down in the bottom of a mine—how the miners lived and ate and played. I am satisfied with the conditions as I found them."

Ford got down on his knees and crawled nearly a mile, down into the bowels of the earth when the compartment was too low to permit walking. He saw the miners blast coal and saw the cutting machines working three miles back into the mountains.

He visited the miners' homes, saw their wives cooking. Inspected the playgrounds and schools provided by his company for the children and inquired both of men and officials as to the general morale and working spirit of the miners.

FALSE HISTORY ATTACKED BY McSWEENEY

Declares Propaganda Carried on Here Dangerous to America and the World

Edward F. McSweeney of Boston, speaking at a banquet of Knights of Columbus in Pittsburgh, denounced British propaganda in the United States, particularly the attempt to alter American history.

McSweeney, who is chairman of the Columbus Historical Commission, pointed out that such propaganda was dangerous, not only to America, but to the world.

"The effort to color American history so as to favor British interests, he said, had its real beginning in 1885. He continued:

"This movement has made such progress that today not alone political history is distorted, but the academic teaching on current economic problems is based on false premises and is calculated to create public opinion which will force a sentimental decision based on the desire for Anglo-American friendship rather than to encourage a calm, dispassionate survey of the facts and principles and fair play to all the countries in the family of nations.

"The false teaching of history not alone thrusts at the sources and fountainhead of nationality; it, in fact, threatens our economic security.

"The tremendous force of alien propaganda in the United States, before and after our entrance to the World War, is not surmise. It is a matter of official record. The details and methods of the proposed revision of the history textbooks in the United States are openly disclosed. If this succeeds, the true significance of the American Revolution will be obliterated, its heroes defamed or appropriated.

"Our school children are being taught that the Revolutionary patriots were fighting the battle of Englishmen for a democracy, which by the enfranchisement of the industrial class actually did not come until 100 years later."

Mr. McSweeney was roundly cheered when he told of the work of the K. of C. in combating the attempt to falsify American history.

Good Better Best

THE very nature of man stirs him to excel. The true craftsman is never satisfied. There are degrees in everything. One thing excels another. Good! Better! Best!

You may have been told one watch is as good as another. That is wholly untrue. There are good watches, there are better watches, there is also the best watch.

The Breguet hairspring in a Waltham Watch is made by an entirely different method from that of any other watch in the world. It is hardened and tempered in form.

There are many other exclusive horological achievements in a Waltham Watch which it will profit you to investigate.

Stationery of Distinction

Great-grandfather signed himself: "I am, my dear sir, your humble and obedient servant." Letters were written on ruled paper and the writing was ornamented with graceful curves and flourishes.

Nowadays letters are signed more simply. The stub pen has replaced the olden-time quill. And the stationery is far more attractive. Modern paper-making has reached such perfection that it is possible to be as individual and correct in one's stationery as in one's dress.

The French papers we have just received are unusually charming. The gay envelope linings that have so enlivened the recent fine papers continue in vogue. Stationery in delicate pastel tints is particularly alluring when the monogram is engraved in a deeper shade of the same tone.

The French papers or some unusual American papers just received make very attractive gifts and bridge prizes. A box to the debutante or the recently engaged girl will be greatly appreciated for all the necessary "thank you" notes.

THREE KILLED IN TRAIN ROBBERY IN MEXICO

Mexico City, Oct. 14. (By the Associated Press)—Fifty armed men, under the leadership of the rebel captain, Castillo, held up a passenger train from Vera Cruz to Mexico City near Signoral, seven miles from Puebla, robbed the passengers and escaped with considerable booty. The bandits escaped after forcing the passengers to walk into the village of Signoral. Shots were exchanged and three persons were killed. Whether these were bandits or passengers was not stated.

BOSTON SECOND LAST AS CITY OF HOMES

Fewer Owned Here Than Any Place but New York, Bankers Are Told

Boston has fewer home owners in proportion to population than any other city in the country with the single exception of New York, according to a statement made today to 400 members of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League by Franklin T. Miller of Auburndale, a member of the housing division of the bureau of standards.

The bankers are meeting today in their 33d annual convention in Hotel [redacted].

In the United States today there are 24,000,000 families and only 20,000,000 homes, according to Miller.

George H. Wyman, president of the league, urged a rule barring all depositors of less than six months' standing from borrowing money. He pointed out the fact that averages show six depositors or shareholders are needed to carry the loan of one person.

Charles A. Morss, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston, praised the workings of the Federal reserve system, declaring that the local branch is one of the strongest in the country.

HARDINGS AND COOLIDGES AT KNOX FUNERAL

Leading Dignitaries of Nation Attend Services at St. John's, Washington

By Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Governmental affairs of the nation halted today while its leaders, headed by President Harding, attended the funeral services for the late Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, former Secretary of State and Attorney General.

The services were held at St. John's Episcopal Church, which he attended and was conducted by the Rt. Rev. Alfred Harding, Bishop of Washington.

President Harding and Mrs. Harding, Secretary Christain, and the President's military aide, Colonel Sherrell, occupied a front pew before the black silk casket, which bore a large cluster of red roses. Behind the President were Vice-President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge, Speaker Gillett and Mrs. Gillett, Mrs. Knox, the senator's children and other relatives.

Members of the Supreme Court, headed by Chief Justice Taft, occupied the next pews, and behind them were members of the Cabinet, including Secretaries Hughes, Mellon, Hoover and Weeks and Postmaster-General Hays.

Almost half of Mr. Knox's associates of the Senate were present. The honorary pallbearers were the members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, headed by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and Senator Underwood of Alabama, Democratic floor leader.

DRESS AND LOOK THIN

Larger women's long-tunic tricotine dresses, $35

One of the biggest aids to slim lines in a larger woman is the long tunic, because by adding length it apparently detracts from the width.

Note the lower-placed belt, which makes for straight lines also. The navy blue tricotine, too, makes for slimness and will wear well, and the soutache and gilt thread embroidery adds a touch of color. Sizes 44 to 52 inclusive.

Larger women's Tricotine dresses, $35

This is just one of a hundred and one Filene values in larger women's dresses. In Filene's there is an entirely separate dress shop for larger women; with a woman in charge who is absolutely in touch with the problems of larger women, because she herself wears size 46.

THE GIANTS AT LAST PROVE THEY ARE KILLERS

MUGGSY McGRAW'S CHAMPION TRAILING ARBUTUSES—WHO REFUSED TO TRAIL!

Fighting tooth and nail behind the brilliant pitching of Artie Nehf, the New York Giants "brought home the bacon"—the championship of the world—for the second time in the history of the great American pastime. Their fifth and clinching game of the series was scored against young Waite Hoyt, the Yankees' clever twirler. He defeated McGraw's men in two other games. The Giants' victory brought the championship to New York for the first time since 1905, when the immortal Christy Mathewson established his score of three straight victories all by the shut-out route. The Yanks died game. They fought like wild cats but to no avail, although they carried through right up to the ninth inning, which was filled with dramatic incidents. This photo of the Giants was snapped immediately after their great victory. (Photo by Clifford S. Moore, Boston American Staff Photographer.)

GOOD-BYE, YANKEES!

Bancroft, Giant shortstop, crossing the pan in the first for the first and only run of the game. Ironically enough, Bancroft made the tally on a walk to first. When Peckinpaugh let Kelly's grounder go through him he lined for home and made it by a mile. E. Meusel was thrown out at first, ending the inning. (Int.)

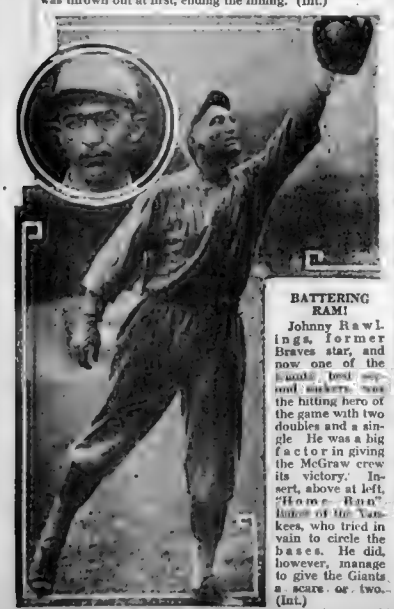

I TOLD YOU SO!

PICKING 'EM SAFE!

Young making a wild, but safe dash at second in the third inning. It didn't do him any good, however, as "Irish" Meusel struck out, and he refrigerated on the second sack. Young reached first on a walk, his second free ticket thus far in the game. E. Meusel had two strikes down when the Youngster made his drive for second. Just made it, too. (Staff Photo.)

BATTERING RAM!

Johnny Rawlings, former Braves star, and now one of the Giants' best second sackers, was the hitting hero of the game with two doubles and a single. He was a big factor in giving the McGraw crew its victory. Insert, above at left, "Home Run" Baker of the Yankees, who tried in vain to circle the bases. He did, however, manage to give the Giants a scare or two. (Int.)

PECK IN TROUBLE!

Peckinpaugh of the Yankees tried to become a second-story worker in the fifth, and was caught with the goods at second. Rawlings was right there waiting for him. Peck was forced, however, Frisch to Rawlings. He had reached first on a walk. (Staff Photo.)

DOWN AND OUT!

Rawlings, Giants' second sacker, getting a nasty tumble when he tried to pilfer the home sack in the second. Old reliable Schang was among those present and nabbed him in his usual snappy manner. Photo shows Rawlings sprawled out on the ground skidding on his belt for the plate. Schang has just tossed the ball back. With one ball down, the McGrawmen's second baseman lifted the sphere into the left garden. Snyder sacrificed, Hoyt to Pipp. Nehf hit a grounder to Peckinpaugh, who drove it to Schang. Rawlings' slide and Schang's put out raised a lusty shout from the fans, who were sure it was another run for the Giants. (Staff Photo.)

Fresh From Paris
Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

PARIS sends two charming suggestions for formal afternoon occasions, each showing details of the latest modes. At the left, king's blue crepe de chine is given first a tunic that lengthens gradually toward the back, and then, to make doubly sure of an irregular border line, it drops a sash-end nearly to the ground at one side. The sleeves are of chiffon in a matching shade, and the hat, also of king's blue crepe de chine, has one side of its brim covered with black uncurled ostrich.

A BLACK duvetyn afternoon gown, round-necked and simple of bodice, has a plain panel at the front of its skirt, while the sides and back are gathered. Particularly smart is an oblong of silver embroidery at the front of the girdle, which gives somewhat the effect of a separate girdle, but is infinitely more charming.

SEEKS MAGRATH FOR SEARLES' AUTOPSY

Donnell Unable to Locate Poison Expert; May Invite Leary to Attend

Lawrence, Oct 14—Unless Dr George B Magrath of Boston can be reached by the district attorney of Essex County today in connection with the autopsy on the body of Millionaire Searles, it is probable that a new representative of the county prosecutor will be named to be present when the organs of the late millionaire are removed for examination.

Several times yesterday District Attorney S. Howard Donnell sought to get in touch with Dr. Magrath by telephone, without success.

Late yesterday afternoon he delegated State Officer Richard P. Griffin to go to Boston in an effort to locate the medical examiner of Suffolk County and ask him to be present at the autopsy

LEARY MAY OFFICIATE.

District Attorney Donnell expresses his confidence in the ability of Dr George W. Dow and Dr. Victor A. Reed, medical examiner and assistant, respectively, of this district, but owing to Dr. Magrath's wide experience in poison cases he believes his presence important.

It was suggested that Medical Examiner Leary of Boston be secured, and it is probable that he will be invited in place of Dr. Magrath, if the latter cannot be located today. Owing to the pressure of Essex County court cases, should the autopsy be held immediately, it would be almost impossible for the district attorney's office to render regular assistance.

State Officer Richard P. Griffin has not yet received official orders to probe into the Searles case, although it is understood that he has been doing some work preparatory to the autopsy

State Officer Griffin figured prominently in the Skeels case and in the exhuming of the bodies of alleged poison victims He is in constant touch with the district attorney, but says thus far he has not questioned any one in connection with the Searles case.

BODY NOT IN CRYPT.

It is expected that today will see the setting of a date for the autopsy and the final cleaning up of affairs leading to the opening of the tomb where the late millionaire's body lies and the examination of the organs.

Various rumors persist regarding the real last resting place of the millionaire. It is said that the body of Searles is not in the crypt originally built for it and which many suppose now contains it, but is buried in another part of the grounds.

The rumors pretend to have leaked from employes of the estate, who say that it will not be necessary to cut through cement to reach the casket.

LOWER RATES MAY FOLLOW WAGE CUTS

Railway Executives Meet to Consider Reduced Charges and Threatened Strike

By Associated Press

Chicago, Oct 14—Confronted by a possible railroad strike over wage reductions and insistent demands from shippers for lower freight rates, Railway executives, meeting here today, discussed a proposal to reduce transportation charges in proportion to future wage reductions.

The railway executives, it is reported, also will consider a proposal to seek an amendment to the transportation act transferring to the Interstate Commerce Commission the wage adjusting authority now vested in the railroad labor board.

The July wage reduction of 12 per cent, ordered by the railroad labor board the executives declared, merely staved off bankruptcy for many roads.

The strike vote of the brotherhoods and shop crafts resulting from this wage cut, it was declared by the executives, was but a force to ward off any further wage reductions Some of the union leaders admitted that the vote did not mean a general walkout of the railroad employes, although it was reported that October 30 had been tentatively agreed upon by the union heads for sectional strikes of the employes, if strikes were finally decided upon.

BOLSHEVIKI TO OFFER MEDIATION IN CHINA

Peking, Oct. 14.—By the Associated Press—Bolshevik Russia intends to offer its mediation between China and the Mongolian republic in an effort to establish amicable relations, it is asserted in a statement issued by the Rosta News Agency, the official Soviet organ in Peking.

BRIDE'S BODY IN THE LAKE.

The mystery of Lake Mashapaug Did Mrs. Norah Johnson Kellelle, Radcliffe College girl, arrange an almost impossible suicide or was she murdered and tossed into the water? In the hills around the little lake the suicide theory is scouted. Read the story, illustrated, in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

REPORT WAR IS NEAR IN UPPER SILESIA

London, Oct. 14.—Two millions of soldiers—allied, Polish and German—may become involved in hostilities in Upper Silesia, according to advices received by the Daily Sketch.

It is reported in French sources that German troops are crossing the border into Upper Silesia constantly and France is making preparations for actual warfare.

The Polish troops have been armed and trained by the French and are concentrated for war purposes.

Five Days' Free Trial of any Columbia Grafonola with any 12 Columbia Records

We know that the Columbia Grafonola at today's prices is the biggest musical value ever known.

So we make this offer:

We'll put in your home for five days' free trial any standard model Columbia Grafonola with any 12 Columbia Records.

Twelve records will give you twenty-four different selections, and you can make a real test of the joy and happiness Columbia music brings to your home.

Then, if you are satisfied, you can pay for the Grafonola and records on very easy monthly terms.

No charge will be made for the five days' trial.

If you are not satisfied, we will take back the Grafonola and records without any charge to you or any obligation on your part.

Could any offer be fairer? You need not pay one cent until you satisfy yourself beyond all doubt by a five days' trial that the Columbia Grafonola is the phonograph you want.

We know that the Columbia Grafonola with its handsome design and glorious richness of tone can be depended upon to speak for itself in your home.

Compare the modern Grafonola at today's prices with any other phonograph—we'll leave the rest to you.

It is literally true that you can get today an up-to-date Columbia Grafonola with its many modern improvements for less money than you would pay for an old-fashioned unimproved phonograph.

When you pay your good money for a phonograph, get a modern instrument—the Columbia Grafonola.

This offer, limited to present supply, is good at any of these stores on any Grafonola priced $30, $45, $60, $85, $100, $125, $140, $150, $175.

PETERS PRAISES CLEAN KEITH VAUDEVILLE

Mayor Wires Congratulations on Third-of-Century Anniversary to E. F. Albee

Mayor Andrew J Peters wired E F Albee, head of the B. F. Keith vaudeville circuit, congratulating him upon a celebration to be held throughout the entire country in honor of the "Third of a Century" of Keith vaudeville.

The telegram from Mayor Peters read as follows "Permit me to add my congratulations to those so properly being sent you in connection with your third of a century anniversary celebration. I know that the citizens of Boston join with me in wishing continued success to B. F. Keith's an institution which was founded in this city, and which has spread forth throughout the country clean, wholesome entertainment."

In sending the wire Mayor Peters has joined many of the most notable figures of the country who have showered congratulations upon the present head of Keith vaudeville. These include David Belasco, Charles Dillingham, Postmaster-General Hays, Governor San Souci of Rhode Island, Mayor Hylan of New York and many prominent actors and singers

WIFE DECLARES HUSBAND HAD 'BEST GIRL'

Admits She Wrote to "Her Butcher Boy, but Denies Criticizing Him for Neglect

Worcester, Oct. 14.—How a husband had a "best girl" and how his wife had written letters to a butcher boy while he was in France came out at a hearing in court here of a separate support action by Mrs. Ernest L. Jordan of Southbridge. In the testimony the name of Miss Inez Harwood, former West Dudley postmistress, whom Mrs Jordan is suing for $50,000, alleging alienation, was frequently mentioned.

Mrs. Jordan declared her husband often said he was going to see "his girl" and on one occasion struck her and told her the undertaker would handle her in the morning, all, the wife said, because of an alleged slight on her part toward Miss Harwood.

On the other hand, Mrs. Jordan admitted she had written to her butcher boy, a youth named Pratt, but denied ever finding fault with him for not taking her to the movies

GENERAL PHONOGRAPH CORPORATION New York

MOTION PICTURE News and Notes

—By Frieda Davis—

ALL too often does an unusual bit of photography in a film pass unnoticed by the average picture fan It is the player who gets the attention and frequently the direction Today photography, and trick photography in particular, plays an important part in the general make-up of a film The ways and means of this "freak" work could easily fill a volume

The normal rate of speed, these facts have been given us by Virgil Miller, head of the camera staff for the Universal Company, is sixteen pictures, or one foot of film per second. To make the action of the picture slower than normal the camera is cranked correspondingly faster To quicken the action, the crank is turned more slowly

Double and triple exposure has become a trick that draws little unusual comment at present Time was when to see the same person chatting, laughing and shaking hands with himself provoked more than a little interest. This trick is done by covering one half or part of the film while a scene is "shot" then the film is reversed and the part taken is covered while the scene is remade with the player playing opposite himself

"GHOSTS ALSO TAKEN."

In this same way "visions," ghosts and dreams are taken A man may be sitting before the fire and sees in the flames the picture of his fiancee. The picture is taken with the centre of the fireplace covered Then the cameraman turns back the film and takes the girl in the part that was formerly unexposed

To this day, however, there is bound to be a certain amount of feeling, subconsciously perhaps, about these double exposures. When, in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," one sees Mary Pickford as the little lord rush towards herself as Dearest, the mother, and fling her arms about her own neck, the continuity and action of the story fades before one's wonder at the clearness of the photography

Occasionally a picture combs along, "Suds," for example, where inanimate objects are given life. This requires not only ingenuity but infinite patience.

In "Suds" the prologue shows a stiffly laundered shirt unfold and make a profound bow to the audience, with, apparently, no human help. This was made by arranging the shirt in one position, taking the picture, stopping the camera, changing the shirt to another position—very slightly altered from the first—and photographing that, and so on until the action is entirely finished Such a trick is a matter of days and weeks, more often weeks.

All this has been accomplished within a compartively short time. What future wonders the camera will bring to the aid of acting and stage directing is hard to imagine. At any rate, it will be spectacular.

TENNESSEE HAS 225-POUNDER AT TACKLE

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 14.—The University of Tennessee football team arrived here late yesterday and is making its headquarters on a railroad siding in the special car in which they came North.

The car was decked with "volunteer" banners and signs. The big man among the visitors is Register, 255-pound tackle, who returned to college a few days ago, after he had left without explanation earlier in the season.

Captain Blair had charge of the squad, the Tennessee coach having remained in New York.

The Tennessee squad numbers twenty-five. The "Fighting Volunteers" are reported to have a dazzling array of forward pass plays which centre around Captain Blair at half back and Lane at end.

GRID GAMES WANTED

The University All Star Midgets of Cambridge desire games with any 98-100-pound teams in and around Boston. Write to Edgar Knudson, No. 40 Union street, Cambridge.

The Roxbury Cardinals would like to arrange games with the best 140-pound teams in the State, away from home. Write No. 41 East Cottage street, Dorchester, or phone Roxbury 1915-J. Call Roxbury 2947 W after 7.30 p. m.

The Baraca Club football team of Dorchester has open dates for Saturday afternoons. Would like to hear from any fast 130-pound amateur football teams. Call Whitty Doherty, Dorchester 6373-W.

The Pere Marquette Juniors desire games with any 118 pound team in the State Saturdays, Sundays or holidays. Only uniform teams wanted. Address Manager, Vincent Conlon, No. 37 M street, South Boston. Telephone S. B. 786-J.

The Farrington A. A. of South Boston would like to meet 115-120 pound teams, either at home or away. Paul L. Norton, manager Farrington A. A., 23 M street, South Boston.

VITAMINES MAY WORK AGAINST THE LOCAL GRID TEAMS

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

According to a certain Dr. Crilley, three of New England's leading football elevens can hope only for defeat on Saturday.

The elevens in question are those of Harvard, Dartmouth and Boston College, which on that day and date respectively oppose teams representing the University of Georgia, the University of Tennessee and Baylor University of Texas, and, according to Dr. Crilley's dope, the deciding factor in each case will be little jiggers known as vitamines.

It seems, if one is to believe Dr. Crilley, that New England soil is entirely lacking in vitamines, and consequently New Englanders are doomed to athletic and mental insignificance, whereas, Georgia, Tennessee and Texas, as well as other points South and West are fairly cluttered up with the little jiggers, and, consequently, on the upgrade athletically and otherwise.

* * *

And yet, and, in spite of Dr. Crilley's assertions, or the rather exaggerated ones of the respective prowess of the "foreign" institutions, the New England teams and their followers are rather counting on victories in all three cases.

* * *

Of the three New England colleges facing opponents from other sections, Boston College probably has drawn the most difficult assignment, for it involves the long trip to Dallas, and the playing of the game on a foreign field and before a foreign audience, but B. C. should win, just as Harvard and Dartmouth should win.

GREATEST GAME OF WHOLE SERIES

Giants In Name and In Deeds the Same Take the Biggest Prize

By George Kelly.

New York, Oct. 14.—Giants to name, in deeds the same.

* * *

Having waited since 1905, John J. McGraw again guided his team to the championship of the baseball world. He failed in 1911, 12 13 and 17, but the club of 1921 came through. And there was a greater thrill in this victory, for we downed the Yankees, rivals for popularity in this city.

* * *

"The greatest game for the biggest prize, with the most sensational finish," these were words of hundreds of fans, after the game was over.

* * *

Well, we shall let it go at that, but before any one says any more about the championship of 1921 let them shake hands with Johnny Rawlings. Rawlings started the play that saved the game and prevented us from going extra innings, or possibly nine games with the Yankees.

* * *

When Baker hit that ball down toward right field, every ounce of power in the strong body of the Maryland farmer was behind, the ball hugged the earth and Rawlings dove at the ball. He got it rolling over and over, but came up and threw Baker out to me.

* * *

Ward was racing for second and kept right on. I saw the play in the making and cut loose a throw to Frank Frisch. The peg had to be perfect, and the tag had to be sure.

* * *

If Ward had made the far turn with Schang coming up, the Lord alone knows what might have happened. But the play was made and the game was won.

* * *

Rawlings has been playing under a severe handicap for some time, even before the series opened. He has a bad bone bruise on his heel, and he has his sore foot encased in adhesive tape. Most players would be out of the game, but Rawlings, like Babe Ruth, stuck it out, and he, more fortunate than Ruth, was in to the end.

* * *

He was at his best yesterday and not only did he make several plays which were above the ordinary, but he crashed three hits. It was no fault of his that he did not drive runs over.

* * *

It was a great game and Waite Hoyt deserves all the credit in the world for his game effort. He was greater today than the last time he faced us, but the luck was not in the game for him. We got only six hits off his delivery, and with perfect support he might have kept us out on the field until darkness enveloped the field.

* * *

We got six hits off him which were all clean, but he took a strike-out for every hit. He got me twice on strikes. He pitched perfectly to me, I'll say that without any qualification. Moreover, I want no alibis made for me. He simply pitched perfect baseball.

* * *

There is always some regret when a game goes that way on a pitcher, but we have had our share of tough luck, don't forget that. Yankee fans need not complain on the error made by Peck. That ball may have looked easy, but I know how hard it was hit, and the leather spun down, hugging close to the earth. Peck expected the ball to come up to him, but it spun down, and went through into left field, scoring our first run.

* * *

I wish that it had been a clean hit, but results count. We won, and one double play at the end established our fielding strength. We had to make that stack play, and we did it. We won by one run, mind you, and the Yankees had more chances to score than we did.

* * *

In the first inning they had runners on second and third, and Nehf struck out Wallie Pipp. No alibi there. In the fourth inning they had three on with Schang at the bat. Schang drove the ball to George Burns. In that fourth don't forget that Burns made a wonderful catch of Meusel's drive to the left centre field fence.

* * *

It was a wonderful play that, and it figured heavily in our favor. No, I don't believe that there is any alibi for the Yankees. They had their chance and they made the most of it.

When I walked across the Polo Grounds last evening a baseball writer asked me what would have happened if the Yankees had another pitcher. He seems to think that the American Leaguers would have won.

* * *

I told him then that the series might have gone nine games. It might have, but the result would have been the same. We could have beaten the Yankees under any and all circumstances, and there is nothing to be said on that score.

We outhit the vaunted sluggers of the Johnson league; we outfielded them and in the tight places outgamed them. All honor to Mays and Hoyt, the Stonewall Jacksons of a lost cause. They pitched marvelous ball, but Phil Douglas and Art Nehf pitched just as good ball and when the Yankees stopped we had Jess Barnes to step in and win the honors for us.

Perfect balance, so far as the series may be concerned, won for us. The punch of the Yankees was blocked before it started. Our men knew how and where to pitch to the boys, and therefore they were stopped.

Says Washington Is the Father of This Country, but He Wouldn't Know His Child Today

It took hundreds of years to prove that the earth was round and it's going to take hundreds more to prove to us that it's square.

The world owes us a living, but most of us have to get it through a collection agency.

Hundreds of us haven't got a thing and thousands are trying to take it away from us.

We're a country of peace and you can prove it by the war tax on everything.

We first started getting soaked by the flood and we've been getting soaked ever since.

You make a dollar and it costs you a dollar and a half to keep it.

If you have nothing to your name then you only own the world a quarter.

Bread is the staff of life, but a lot of us can't get enough of it to lean on.

It isn't the bread that holds you up, it's the trust that sells it.

You pay sixty cents a dozen for eggs that you can almost eat.

The price we pay for food is a joke, and instead of calling them "Middlemen" we ought to call them "Kindmen."

Everywhere you go they blame it on the trusts. We've got lots of trusts, but no credit.

We used to be able to go to the grocer and butcher and get thirty or sixty days. Now the only place you can get it is in jail.

The Bible says that every man, woman and child shall have a place to live. A lot of landlords ought to read the Bible.

The world was a great place a thousand years ago, and it may be a swell joint a thousand years from now, but that ain't gonna do us any good.

Washington was the father of this country, but he wouldn't know his child today.

You're dust when you're born, you're dust when you die, and while you live here your name is mud.

TEXAS TOWN IS PRODUCER OF STAR PONIES

Midland, Texas, Oct. 14.—This "cow-town," equidistant from El Paso and Forth Worth, also claims to be a polo pony town. It is said to be the greatest shipping depot for polo ponies in the United States. Figures are submitted by men in the pony raising business to prove it.

Polo ponies ridden in the big games in the North and East are Midland raised horses—at least many of them. Two Midland bred ponies, Snail and Huckleberry Slim won first and second prizes in New York at the Meadowbrook club.

In the international 1921 polo games played in London, the American team won, and one of the ponies of the winning team, Lucky Strike, was a Midland product. Midland ships about 500 first class polo ponies every year to northern and eastern cities.

REED AND BOGASH MEET IN TEN ROUND BATTLE AT MECHANICS TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY

Now that the Giants have convinced even our Mayoralty candidates that the Yankees have not much of a wrecking crew with Babe Ruth devoting his time to uplifting American literature our handsome box fighters can once more gaze upon their names in cold print.

With the stories of the World's Series now doomed to places alongside of Ban Johnson's Winter remarks, our brave fighting men will have an even chance of making enough money to pay their income [illegible]es.

Apparently somebody informed Messrs. McKirdy and McCarthy that there would not be any World's Series pastime today, for these public spirited gentlemen have a perfectly good fistic offering for the Commercial A.'s show at Mechanics Building tonight.

Pal Reed, Natick's punching Sunday school teacher, will try to prove that Louis Bogash has about as much license to parade in the front ranks of our noble middleweight division as any of you gentlemen would have of getting some real liquor from a hootch peddler.

* * *

Bogash has made two trips to Boston from Bridgeport during the past couple of months. And they have been very successful excursions. He first walloped Johnny Tillman, who came all the way from St. Paul to stop Lou's thrusts. Then Handsome Joseph Eagan of Dorchester got in the way of a lot of Bogash punches and was beaten.

* * *

Naturally enough Bogash feels he will win once more tonight. He is in much the same position as the landlady who had a star boarder who always handed over the necessary iron men each week. Said lady got taking habits and was not supplied with any shock absorbers when the celebrated prune snatcher grabbed his baggage and slipped down the back stairway and out into the cold night.

* * *

Reed has an idea he is going to pull the star boarder stunt on Bogash tonight.

"Of course Bogash is a tough bird," ventured Pal as he paraded into the office of the Commercial Club today. "But so were the Yanks tough. And you know what the Giants did to them.

"I have met a lot of fancy boxers in my day. And I must confess that some of them didn't improve the appearance of my face a bit. So 'tis quite a relief to know that I am going to be in the ring with a walloping fellow tonight. They tell me that Bogash likes to fight equally as much as a politician does to issue statements. This means that I shall have a very pleasant evening. I won't have to take any nuxated iron this week with a chance to build up my blood by engaging in a regular fight."

* * *

Then we collided with Bogash. Apparently he has been reading Mark Antony's speeches or some such thing, for he said:

"I shall fight with my whole body. I shall fight with my whole mind. I shall fight with my whole heart. I shall win."

A grand statement by a fighting man. Statesmen please copy.

* * *

Of course the other boxers who will appear on tonight's card are entitled to recognition

Jack McClellan, once of California but now lingering around our Public Library, will meet Bill McKinnon in a ten-round bout. Tex Rickard won't be at the ringside to sign up the winner of this quarrel for a match in Madison Square Garden, but the match should nevertheless be crowded with action.

* * *

Barney Rivers of Woonsocket will opposite Jimmy Sacco of East Boston in the semi-final of ten frames, while Joe Welsh of East Boston and Joe Tarr of Providence will start the show and will make a noble effort to convince those present that they are combative young men.

Reservations may be secured during the day at room 12, No. 28 School street, and in the evening at Mechanics Building by those gentlemen who did not wager the entire family B. R. on the Yanks in the recent Ruthless affair

BALTIMORE-LOUISVILLE BALL SERIES PUT OVER

Baltimore, Oct. 14.—There was no game today in the post-season series between the Baltimore Internationals and the Louisville team of the American Association.

The series will be resumed tomorrow with the count standing Baltimore 3, Louisville 2, and there will be a game daily until the winner is decided.

GEORGIA ELEVEN IN STADIUM TOMORROW

Consider Harvard Team Strong Enough to Take Southerners Into Camp

LINEUP AT STADIUM

HARVARD	GEORGIA
Fitts, le	re, Murray
Kane, lt	rt, Pew
Brown, lg	rg, Anthony
Bradford, c	c, Day
Grew, rg	lg, Whelchel
Tierney, Hobson, rt	lt, J. Bennett
Macomber, re	le, Reynolds
Buell, qb	qb, Randall
Jenkins, lhb	rhb, Fletcher
Rouillard, rhb	lhb, Spicer
Owen, fb	fb, Tanner

Harvard will face the University of Georgia tomorrow afternoon in the fifth game of its schedule. The Crimson eleven, while not up to the teams that Harvard has had in recent years, yet is considered strong enough to take the Southerners into camp by a small score.

The Crimson will have several new faces in its lineup. Roscoe Fitts, who has been groomed for a week or two to play on end, will substitute for Jack Crocker, who is not expected to play.

If Charley Tierney cannot get into action Arthur Hobson will play right tackle.

Frenchy Rouillard will start at right half in place of Erwin Gehrke. Rouillard has been doing some sweet work this year and his promotion is deserved

Harvard still has a clean slate, with a narrow escape from defeat at the hands of Holy Cross. Quarterback Buell scored a drop kick against the Purple. Georgia has defeated Mercer and Furman, teams hardly in Harvard's class. Furman scored a touchdown in a 27 to 7 contest.

Former Head Coach Haughton and Leo Leary assisted Fisher in the Stadium yesterday. A long fundamental drill took up the greater part of practice.

EXETER STARS OUT OF YALE FRESHMAN GAME

Exeter, N. H., Oct. 14.—Injuries are liable to hurt Exeter's chance against the Yale freshmen tomorrow afternoon as Clement Coady, tackle, has joined Thomas Driscoll, his left tackle mate, and Lester Colby, guard, although both have a chance to play except Driscoll, who is likely to be out till next week.

All three are known in Boston scholastic football circles, Driscoll being a Boston boy, and Coady of West Newton, played guard on the Newton High eleven last year, while Colby is a Cambridge boy.

Coach Blake is undecided who will take Driscoll's place, but it will be either William Miller of Haverhill, tackle on last year's Haverhill High, or William H. Forrest of Stoneham, tackle on the Boston High School of Commerce last year, and who has been playing centre for Exeter thus far.

SHADE TO MAKE DEBUT IN NEW YORK TONIGHT

New York, Oct. 14.—Billy Shade, San Francisco light heavyweight, will make his Eastern ring debut tonight at Madison Square Garden in a fifteen-round bout with Fay Keiser of Cumberland, Md. The winner will be a prospective contender for the world's light heavyweight title. Tex Rickard has made arrangements for tonight's victor to meet Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, who is seeking a match with Tom Gibbons of St. Paul. Gibbons is already matched to meet Georges Carpentier.

TECH HARRIERS HOLD RUN SATURDAY

The Tech cross-country runners are preparing for the annual Fall handicap at Franklin Park, which Coach Frank Kanaly will hold tomorrow afternoon. The results of the race will help Coach Kanaly decide on the makeup of this season's freshmen and varsity cross-country [illegible]

Between sixty and seventy men have entered, and the coach may have to divide up the squad and hold the freshman handicap on Sunday morning. Handicaps, up to six minutes, will be given for the five-mile race. The freshmen will run over a three and a half mile course.

The captain of the team, Elmer Sanborn, is the scratch man. The team will finally be made up of the fastest twelve men.

Two silver loving cups have been donated, the first by Alfred F. Nye, Tech '15, for the fastest time, and the other by Harvey S. Benson, Tech '12, for first place

CAPTAIN BUTLER WILL PLAY FOR WESLEYAN

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 14.—Wesleyan will have some of its disabled veterans back in the lineup against Boston University Saturday. Captain Butler has recovered from injuries and is at end, and La Gank at right tackle. Whether Al Fricke will be at halfback is problematical, but his brother may be able to take his place.

Shift in Game Time

Manager David Govenar of the Lexington High School football team, which is playing a great game this Fall, announces that the contest with Wellesley High School eleven, originally scheduled for Saturday afternoon, October 22, at Lexington, has been shifted to the Wellesley gridiron, and will be staged in the morning, as the Lexington field is to be unavailable.

Columbus Park Game

The Ostian football team of South Boston and the Rambler A. C. of Cambridge meet at Columbus Park tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

LOT OF GORE SPILLING IN THE SERIES BUT NO DISPLAY OF YELLOW

By IRVIN S. COBB

New York, Oct. 14.—Let others sing, as doubtless others will, of a finish of a World's Series rag hunt so loaded with thrill and suspense that literally it out-dramers drama itself.

Let others sing, with a hay-niddy-noddy or a fol-de-rol-day, or whatever is proper to sing with under such circumstances, of a winning team which, coming twice from behind with a rush and a roar, finally, with its Eli-lengths of hickory, raps out taps for its rivals.

* * *

Let yet others sing of an outfit who meet worst with heads bloodied but unbowed, their records as a club and as individuals unstained by any sullying taint of saffron.

* * *

Finally let all hands sing of a sapling of a kid from Brooklyn, name of Hoyt, who, in twenty-seven innings of pitching, is scored on but twice, and one of those scores bred out of an error by a slip-up at that.

* * *

For surely this youngster deserves his meed of words and music. It is the first time in communal history when anybody from Brooklyn has lasted out the full of a week in Manhattan without requiring the attentions either of the police or the medical profession.

* * *

As I was saying let others sing of these things. I fain would sing of the only World's Series of which I have had personal cognizance, and I believe the only World's Series that ever was, which is played out to its ultimate conclusion without signs of breaking or faltering from either side; a World's Series that is marked, so far as a bystander can figure by clean sportsmanship from start to finish, a World's Series in which there are no quitters, none who flinches from the gaff, none who soldiers or sulks or weakens, none who, whether winning or losing, failing or succeeding, refuses to give of the best that is in him to the role he has essayed in the crowning seasonal classic of the national game.

* * *

There was a lot of gore spilling in these eight days, but not so much yellow displayed as would dye the tip of a humming bird's tiniest pin feather.

* * *

It should be written that 1921 has wiped the shield of our hemisphere pastime clean of the befouling smear which 1919 put upon it. Let Jackson and Cicotte and Weaver, and the rest of that group, who sold their birthright for so sorry a mess of gamester's pottage, read the record, and weep.

There is no occasion for hysteria but there is occasion to say, and this appears to be a very good and a fitting place for saying it that honesty pays just as well on a ball-field as it does elsewhere.

Speaking of the gentle art of quitting, this town of New York is a curious town. All over the nation yesterday, from the chilblained coasts of Maine to where the native son stands on the golden strand of California praying his prayer of "Give us this day our daily tourist," the populace watched the score boards, the ticker or the newspaper bulletins for the tidings, inning by inning, as the Yanks and Giants battled it out.

* * *

Both teams belonged to Manhattan and by all the standards of local pride Manhattan should have stormed the turnstiles of the Polo Grounds to see the ultimate issue definitely decided. But Manhattan is as free from the thing called local pride as is China or the planetary system.

* * *

Is the grandstand overflowing on this, the day of all baseball days? It is not. Are the bleachers packed? Most emphatically they are not. Does the crowd go crazy as, through minute after minute the result teeters on the hair edge of uncertainty? I give you one guess.

* * *

To be sure, the weather may have been an affecting cause. The only person appropriately named for the prevalent weather was the smallest living umpire, O. Chill.

Or shall that the present plan of stretching the World's series out to a possible quchee of nine games is an overtax upon the enthusiasm of the populace?

* * *

No, I maintain that the real reason lies in the fact that New York is too dad-gummed overgrown to have the healthy emotions which stir lesser yet more human communities. It has curiosity but it lacks enthusiasm. It is morbid, but it is not inquisitive. It applauds a winner, but it walks out on a loser, no matter how gallant that loser may be.

* * *

Well, those who stayed away certainly missed something. They missed the greatest last act curtain that a World's Series has ever yet produced.

* * *

Consider the situation

* * *

The orchestra is playing shivery music. Eliza sways on the ice floes. The Siberian bloodhounds bay in the distance. The child has just been found in London. The luggar lies in the offing—once aboard her and all may yet be well. The heroine has been bound fast to the railroad tracks and the midnight mail thunders down upon her. The missing papers are in the old mill, but the mill is on fire. The misunderstood maiden is about to be driven forth into a blinding snowstorm. In another minute the mortgage on the old homestead will be foreclosed. The villain is shoving the helpless hero off the edge of the cliff.

* * *

Who will save him now? Where is Hawkshaw the detective? Where is brave Jack Dalton? Ah, but who is this, swathed in bandages, limping on one leg and hobbling on the other who advances to the centre of the stage? Can it be? It can'!! 'Tis none other!!

* * *

And what happens? In the last half of the ninth inning, with the score 1 to 0, with game and series hanging in the balance, with every prospect before him that a hit may start the rally which will change the result, with the audience breathing in short pants, with Yank rooters praying and Giant rooters keeping their fingers tightly crossed, the king of the clouters fails to deliver.

* * *

Even so: the Babe in his last spectacular appearance made a better showing than did that other deposed king of home-run hitters, G. Kelly. At least he smacked the ball smartly, whereas Long George maintained to the bitter end his original defensive plan of batting.

* * *

The system he followed may have its good points. If a batter makes it a custom to strike out in pinches, at least he avoids antagonizing the opposing pitcher. He promotes a better feeling.

* * *

After the Babe's well-meant and valiant but fizzling valedictory, what followed the last twenty seconds of play was bound to be in the nature of an anti-climax even though it reached its crescendo in a marvelous double play, from short to first to third, with one man making a magnificant throw while down on his back in the dirt and with two others in a huddle of twirling bodies at third, a play which brings the curtain down and insures the winner's end of a magnificent purse to the club of John McGraw.

* * *

There were incidental details deserving of mention in passing. Ollie, the well-known Chill, officiating behind the plate appeared to be missing a good many of 'em. He was the object of considerable adverse rooting from the stands.

* * *

And Hoyt, who started in with a sore thumb, had a disposition to match it after Oliver had seemingly misjudged several of the infant prodigy's shooters.

* * *

It was in the run of the luck that Peckinpaugh, that competent player, should make the error which let in the one, and the winning run for the Giants.

Likewise it was quite in accord with the natural course of events that Frisch, Schang and Burns, three of the steadiest going, hardest working, most dependable gladiators ever developed in a World's Series, should on the last day of all maintain the gait which from the outset had marked them as master players.

The next sporting event of national interest in these parts will be the Army and Navy game in November, as this man Duncan against whom I played golf on Tuesday is sailing for his native Scotland on Friday, thus depriving your correspondent of a prospect of a return match.

I had expected to show him a lot of new wrinkles, too, things he never had dreamed of in connection with the game he essays to play. For one thing, on our next engagement I meant to use two caddies, the first caddy to look for lost balls and the second caddy to look for the first caddy. Also I was going to carry a bucket of ice water around the course for use at the bunkers in keeping the face of my niblick cooled. Well, I shall have to wait until another year to lick Duncan and the Yanks must wait until another October to win a world's championship pennant, and I believe they will.

RUTH HAS CONSOLATION OF GOING DOWN WITH HIS BOOTS ON

By BABE RUTH

New York, Oct. 14.—The only consolation I have after the most heart rending finish in the eighteen years of World's Series history is the fact that I actually participated in the defeat and went down with my boots on.

The doctor had prohibited me even as much as taking a bat in my hand. I had stood the ordeal for two depressing days. Through two dreary games I sat in the press box with everybody looking at me like some poor cripple. Over the shoulders of newspaper writers and telegraph operators I had read the doleful details of two Giants' victories in a row.

* * *

I couldn't stand it any longer. I wouldn't stand it. No baseball player in the world, with a grain of sand in his makeup, could endure another afternoon of retirement while the championship of the world was slowly slipping through the fingers of his fighting pals.

* * *

Arm or no arm I made up my mind to break through the wall of precaution that would eat a fellow's heart away. I talked it over with Mrs. Ruth and put it up as a matter of duty to the club. I notified the doctor and he was furious.

* * *

Perhaps I did the boys no good But at least I did no harm. When that historic ninth inning rolled around I forgot all about my arm, and the doctor and the possible result. I asked Wally Pipp to let me take his place and started the inning.

* * *

But right there the cruel, bitter reality of my helplessness stared me in the face, for as I took the first good swing a painful quiver went shooting through my swollen arm, and I realized Nehf would be the master.

* * *

With two strikes on me I hit the ball as hard as I could, which under the circumstances was very feeble.

* * *

A very few minutes later, with the Yankees fighting desperately, I saw a miraculous double play snatch away the championship of the baseball world, but I am happy and thankful that I was in harness when it happened, and wearing the same uniform in which the Yankees were victorious at the end of a glorious, uphill fight in the American League.

* * *

Now I will never in future years have to hear a Yankee pal recall this series with such regret as these.

* * *

"If Babe could have only tried to help us in the pinch there might have been a different story."

* * *

That was the horrible idea that had been driving through my mind these past two days. When the pinch came today I tried. I failed but I am happy.

* * *

In all these years I have been through a lot of championship campaigns where the pressure of a nerve racking finish has nearly driven my teammates into nervous prostration.

* * *

I have participated in two great World's Series before this and have had the glory of being on the winning end.

* * *

But never in a lifetime do I think there will take place such a brilliant and spectacular post-season series as the now completed battle of the Giants and the Yankees.

* * *

The highest honors in baseball now belong to New York City and at least for that much every Yankee player is jubilant tonight. Next year I look for it again with the Yankees in the winning role.

$900,000 PAID BY FANS TO SEE BIG SERIES; RAWLINGS HERO

By NICK FLATLEY.

New York, Oct. 14.—Baseball passes into the mothballs, with the Giants again champions of the world, first time since 1905, and the Yankees admittedly the best second placers that ever put up the big fight against odds in the post season jamboree.

The total receipts for all eight games, exclusive of war tax, is $900,-333. Each club gets $226,337.46 and the Giants will divide $131,635.35 and the Yankees $87,756.95. The share for the Advisory Board is $135,034.20.

The Yanks were beaten in the eighth game 1 to 0, and thereby lost the title, assimilating five defeats against the three they pinned on the McGraws but they went down with all flags flying, and the guns roaring and everything.

Their shattered lineup stood valiantly through the ultimate game, the most thrilling of them all, and but for an error by Peck, whose other efforts were startling and marvelous, as well as spectacular, there's no telling how the series might have concluded.

KICKS ONE IN FIRST.

The Yanks' shortstop kicked one in the first inning and a run trickled over from second. That was the only score of the contest, as undeserved and unfortunate as the counter that brought triumph to the National League forces in the Wednesday game.

Waite Hoyt and Arthur Nehf had another of their wonderful pitching battles, and this time the sturdy right hander of the Yanks had to bow to the southpaw excellence of the little Giant. Nehf had lost two tough ones, both to Hoyt, and a victory was only his share.

But Waite, with a bad finger and a disheartened team back of him, gave an exhibition that inscribed his name on the scrolls of fame as the gamest hurler that ever went down with a losing cause. Had his pals done as well as he, they would be playing the ninth and deciding game this afternoon.

Small Johnny Rawlings, who has been as pestiferous as a mosquito all through the series, emerged as the real hero of the closing clash. Three times he came up to bat and blazed out hits. They didn't knock any runs off the bases, but it wasn't his fault if the other Giants couldn't get on there when Johnny was coming up.

* * *

He won his real glory in the field, though. Time and again he came up with nasty bounders that meant runs, or at least hits for the Yanks. He covered the patrol around second as Eddie Collins and Johnny Evers used to do, on their great days. He engineered the last couple of outs in as dramatic and startling fashion as one of these great title can produce.

* * *

Big Babe Ruth, suffering agonies from his wounded arm, came up as a pinch hitter in the ninth. He dribbled to Kelly after a couple of futile swings had caused him untold agony.

* * *

Aaron Ward drew a base on balls.

* * *

It was up to Frank Baker. The ancient hero of the big swat cut a nasty bounder between Rawlings and Kelly. It looked like a hit and the [illegible]. But small Johnny tore desperately over and flung himself at the flying baseball. He nailed it on the hop, just as he came up through a cloud of dust from his dive. He tossed to Kelly for a sensational out.

* * *

But that was only the half of it.

Big George, who was booed all afternoon by the birds who had been out there seven afternoons waiting for his homer, made that putout at first, and had the ball as he saw Ward floating toward third.

* * *

He was faced with a chance for a quick finish or a peg that meant a tie if the ball wasn't right on the mark. He never hesitated, and more power to him. There was plenty of courage back of that lightning hurl across the diamond.

* * *

Plenty of heart, too, in the action of young Mister Frisch as he grabbed the ball and fell with a terrific crash on the wildly sliding Yankee runner. Ward was out, and the series over in the whirl of the finest play of a whole flock of star performances.

* * *

Before he started to pitch, Hoyt was told by Umpire Chill that he could not spit on his hands and then rub them in the dirt. This is said to be against the rules and the kid promised to be good and keep his hands clean and dry.

* * *

Burns was up only for a short time. He rolled to Baker and was pegged out. Bancroft, however, worked the child wonder for a pass. After Frisch received three wide ones, Hoyt slipped two strikes over and then Frankie fouled to Pipp. Hoyt again got himself in a hole in pitching to Young and walked him.

* * *

That put two on base and Kelly at bat. Big George came through, aided by Peck. He hit a grounder which flowed through Peck's legs and Bancroft scored. Young going to third. Irish Meusel was thrown out by Hoyt and the inning ended with the Giants one marker to the good.

* * *

Hoyt protested vigorously when Umpire Chill called the fourth ball on Young. The pitcher said it was a strike and when he walked off the field, blamed the umpire for making it possible for the Giants to score.

* * *

Babe Ruth appeared in uniform, as was expected, and went out to the coaching lines at third. His arm was out of a sling and his voice in good form.

* * *

Fewster fanned, but Peck walked. Miller, after fouling off a couple, surprised everybody, including Peck, when he singled to right. Peck got as far as second and stopped. Bobby Meusel took a healthy swing, but the best he could do was raise a pop to Kelly and retire.

* * *

Pipp came up, and after two strikes had been called Nehf inserted a wild pitch, which rolled almost to the grandstand. Both runners advanced a sack and were in position to score on a single. The single, however, never came. Instead Pipp stood up there and allowed himself to be called out on strikes.

* * *

Rawlings socked a double down the left field line as an opening salute in the second. The ball was a foot inside and Baker never got close to it. Johnny was sent to third on Snyder's sacrifice, but that was as far as he got. Nehf hit to Peck and Rawlings was an easy out at the plate. Arthur remained on first while this was going on. George Burns dropped a single into short left, but the knock was wasted. Bancroft couldn't come through and was thrown out by Peck. Two real hits were registered in this inning, but nothing could be done with the mud.

* * *

Snyder ran almost to first base in the Yank half and caught Ward's high fly. Baker, after two strikes had been called, reached out and tapped to Rawlings, and Johnny nailed him at first. Schang made it three straight when he grounded to Bancroft.

Frisch's short fly over second was captured by Miller and Young walked for the second time. Peck got under Kelly's pop fly and while Irish Meusel was up, Young stole second. That was the only excitement as Meusel struck out, ending the inning.

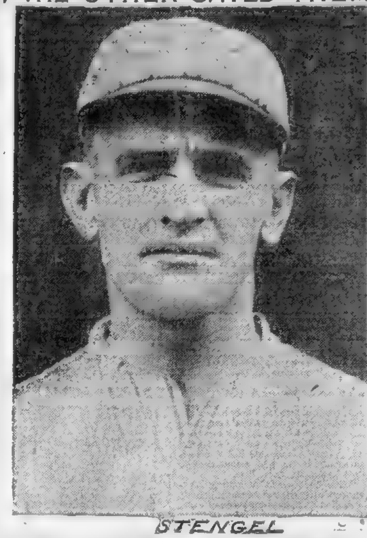

Nehf was a trifle wild in the last of the third, but was saved by a flashy double play. Hoyt was an easy out, but Fewster walked. Then Peck hit to Bancroft and a double killing was put on by Bancroft, Rawlings and Kelly.

Rawlings hit another double down the same left field foul line in the fourth. Snyder again sacrificed and Johnny took third. Bobby Meusel ran in and caught Nehf's short fly and Rawlings remained on third. This put it up to Burns. Georgie was off form and fanned.

The Yanks almost busted up the ball game in the latter portion when, after two were out, Nehf loaded the bases. A great catch by George Burns on Schang's liner saved the day. Burns also made a spectacular catch on Meusel's long drive. Bobby hit one solidly and George got it after running back to the wall in deep centre field. This made two out, Miller having been retired previously.

ONE INCITED THE GIANTS, THE OTHER SAVED THEM

Casey Stengel aroused the fighting spirit of the McGraw clan and Fordham Frank, Frisch defeated the Yankees by going into the dirt yesterday to complete a double play that ended the game.

UMPIRE CHILL'S DECISION IN OPENING INNING DEFEATS YANKEES

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

New York, Oct. 14—In the most dramatic finish ever staged the Giants won the championship of the world and won it, leaving the Yankees with an even claim for the championship of gameness and courage.

The Giants won, because the breaks favored them, and the Yankees lost because they failed, in the pinches, to make good the chances they had.

* * *

When the story of this World's Series is told the hero, or the villain, will be Ollie Chill, the umpire, for it was the calling of one strike, or one ball, whichever it was, that decided the game and in effect, decided the series.

* * *

That strike or ball, whichever it was, will be the centre of argument from now to the end of time. It is well to tell at this stage, what it looked like. It was the first inning, in which Waite Hoyt, the hero of this series, no matter what happened, was pitching stiffly and lacking control.

* * *

His split finger was handicapping his control, and he was a bit wild. He pitched a ball which was either a third strike or a fourth ball. To me it looked as if the ball failed to break properly, and just missed the corner of the plate.

* * *

Umpire Chill called it a ball, and as there was a runner on first it forced him down to second, and Hoyt after scolding the umpire, and plainly upsetting himself, pitched to Kelly, who whanged a hit through short. The ball was hard hit, and Peck might have handled it, but failed, and the first run went home.

* * *

Then the two pitchers, both of whom doped to be hit rather hard, settled down to the task and engaged in one of the greatest duels ever seen.

* * *

Three times the Giants had a wonderful chance to increase their ma-[illegible] jority, twice the Yankees [illegible] men along the base paths [illegible] hit would have overset the [illegible] and changed the entire complexion of the series.

* * *

It was a game and brilliant exhibition, with the Yankees showing less brain work and less skill. They were trying to crash through the defence by a system of surprise attacks. They tried every conceivable plan of breaking the Giant defence, but they failed, because Nehf pitched superbly in the pinches and when he needed aid he got it.

* * *

The ninth came on with the score one to nothing, and with the score evidently set. There was a roar when the Yankees, beaten and desperate, sent Babe Ruth, their crippled hero, to bat.

There will be arguments as to the advisability of sending Ruth up to hit, as he was crippled, unable to swing well at low balls and forbidden by his physician to try to play. But for the moral effect and the dramatic climax it was not only good showmanship but good baseball.

* * *

The effort to upset Nehf by that piece of strategy failed entirely, for he pitched to Ruth as if he were a minor leaguer and disposed of him. But the effect was not lost. For Nehf, unsettled a bit by pitching to Ruth, tried too hard in working against Ward and passed him, which brought Frank Baker to bat; and in such a situation Baker is a most dangerous hitter.

I have been advertising 30-oz. Blue Melton bought by Uncle Sam for the United States Navy, and during the warm weather I am cutting up from 100 to 150 overcoats a day, but if I could make you understand the value, it would be easy for me to cut 1,000 overcoats.

BLUE MELTON, bought for the United States Navy a cloth a year ago I would have to charge you at least $60.00 for an overcoat, I will today make to your measure: Single breasted, fly front, double stitched edges, lap seams $15.75

Thirty-five years' service in the tailoring business leaves me with a knowledge of woolens that I consider second to none in the city of Boston. On this knowledge I say to you, the United States Navy bought these meltons from the American Woolen Co. They had to to be up to the standard, certain quality of wool, certain quality of fabric, 30-oz. in weight, in fact they had to be good enough for American citizens who joined the navy, and when all is said and done, there are no scandals attached to the woolens bought by the U. S. Government. On my knowledge of woolens I say that this is the greatest value any tailor or clothier ever offered to his customers.

BLUE MELTON, made up single breasted, double stitched, lap seams, irrespective of size.......... $15.75

OVERCOAT TO ORDER

I advertised high grade worsteds suit to order $22.00 the first of this week. The woolen man who sold me these goods did so with the understanding that I was not to mention the name of what he considers America's FINEST Woolen Mills, so I hereby cut out all reference to the name of the mills, but the goods can be seen in my doorway and they are the fabrics used by the finest tailors in the city at prices running higher than $60 for a suit.

I offer 14 to 16 oz. worsteds from America's finest looms, 3-piece Suit to Order, irrespective of size, $22.00

"You will find a real decline in prices in my shoes — not mark down sales of job-lots.

My new fall shoes average 33⅓% cheaper than a year ago, but quality has not declined a particle.

My policy of stamping the retail price on the soles of my shoes at the factory, protects you against so called 'mark down' shoes which may mean nothing but cheap shoes made to sell cheap.

By buying materials in large quantities for all my store shoes, and by my policy of selling many shoes at a small profit rather than a few shoes at a larger profit, I have always been able to keep my prices below the market.

Filene's MEN'S SHOPS

"Where Looking Incurs No Obligation to Buy"

72% of the suits we sold last Saturday were homespuns, herringbones and other lighter colors

Men's homespun, herringbone, tweed suits

$40

Others $45 to $65

And the reasons, as nearly as we can tell, behind this large buying of these lighter colored homespuns, herringbones and tweeds are:—

First, men are, in general, wearing more of these lighter colored fabrics than ever before.

Second, men have found that Filene's, foreseeing this demand, has a particularly large stock of these suits for them to choose from.

Third, the moderate price at which they are marked and the high all-wool quality in them, make them an economical buy.

For the man who has not yet purchased, there is still a very wide range of fabrics, styles and colors to choose from.

THIS is the anniversary of the famous Battle of Jena in 1806, when Napoleon utterly defeated Prince Hohenlohe and his Prussians after preventing the concentration of the enemy. Hohenlohe surrendered two weeks later to Marshal Lannes.

Proud Professors.

IN ancient days professors were "too proud" to take wages, and depended on gifts from their pupils for their existence. The Emperor Vespasian was the first to establish State-paid education during his reign, about A. D. 69.

A Stirring Narrative of the Influence of Love on the Lives of a Girl and a Man

The Story of an Ambitious Young Sculptor Who Goes to New York to Win His Way

THE ACTION SO FAR

Owen Storrow, a young sculptor coming to New York to perfect himself in his art, meets Torrie Throssel, a strikingly lovely girl studying for the stage under the direction of Herman Krassler, a producer. Storrow saves his cousin, Charlotte Kirkner, from drowning, and she confesses her love for him. Later he marries Torrie, and on the advice of Chester Hardy gives up sculpture and starts to write a novel of the North Country. Torrie, very angry when Storrow divulges their marriage, quarrels with her husband, then repents and contritely tells him she has given up her stage work and that he is the only thing that counts. But Storrow grows more and more suspicious of Torrie's past and she more and more restless.

STORROW, with the feelings of a safe-cracker burdened with over-[illegible]cious loot, proceeded to the Broadway store in question. There the box was promptly fitted with a key which he paid for and pocketed. Then with a quickened pulse he made his way back to the studio.

As he crossed Fifth avenue at Twenty-sixth street he heard himself accosted from a passing taxicab.

"Hello, Captain Kidd," cried a voice close beside him. The appositiveness of that salute sent a tingle through the body against which a ravaged treasure-chest was so tightly pressed. He glanced up to see Mattie Crowder's hectically calsomined face laughing down at him from the door of the slowly moving cab. He recovered himself and called back at her with an assumption of light-heartedness which later impressed him as vapidly ludicrous. He was relieved when he was once more able to lock himself safely in the studio.

There, with a deliberation which was a mild surprise to him, he proceeded to examine the contents of the box. He found the soiled chamois bag with its rings and trinkets. He found a small silver watch without a crystal, a sheaf of newspaper clippings and theatrical programs and a champagne cork with a date written on it in lead pencil. He found a druggist's prescription and the dinner card of a coast steamer overscored with unmistakably clever drawings interspersed with humorous and affectionate comments.

He found two reservation slips with the dates obliterated, for drawing rooms on the West Shore railway, between Weehawken and Buffalo. Then came a few soiled dance favors, the remnants of a small cluster of violets which had once apparently been pressed between the leaves of a book and a small gold pocket pencil minutely indented, as though it had been repeatedly and meditatively held between firm and pointed teeth.

In Costume

Next came a photograph of Torrie in costume with the inscription "My first part," written in ink across the bottom, a snapshot of five laughing girls clustered about the steps of a Pullman car and still another picture of Torrie in her youth, revealing a soft-eyed and smooth-cheeked girl in her early teens flower-like in her freshness with wonder touched by curiosity on the rapt young face above the archaic-looking fichu and the over-heavy locket that nestled in its frills.

The last thing which Storrow lifted out was the package of letters tied together with a cherry-colored ribbon. He had responded, without being conscious of it, to some law of dramatic climax which prompted him to defer what promised to prove the vital movement until the end.

Storrow, who objects to his wife's resuming her career.

He remembered as he untied the tightly knotted ribbon with the feeling that he was opening a door on the past how a great dramatist had once proclaimed the future to be the other past entered by another door. Yet he was unnaturally calm as he crossed the threshold from which he felt he might turn away a strangely altered man. He even prided himself on his self-control, though his quickened breathing stood an acknowledgment of the tax which that control was imposing upon him.

Then he stopped breathing altogether, for the first letter which he unfolded and inspected began with the pregnant words "My Beloved Wood-Bird."

He read it through until he came to the signature, which was the one word "Alan." He read them all, page by page, every impetuous and passionate line, every endearing diminutive, every acknowledgment of immense and abandoned love. After that, there was no more doubt.

Carefully he re-read an allusion to the painting of "The Rainy Morning," an allusion which implied it had been done before a lover's quarrel with Torrie. It left [illegible] as to Torrie herself being the model for that canvas. Yet this discovery came to him now with small sense of shock. It was merely one voice in a drowning choir of accusation. And he read on, harvesting his grim sheaves of knowledge, stopping only once, with a convulsive twitching of the body, when he happened on a ragged-edged sheet of note paper in Torrie's own writing, a sheet apparently sent back to her in a moment of reproof.

"Oh, My Own, my Belovedest Own, Who is All Mine," she had written in her sharp-angled script, though in this instance much less cramped and pointed than usual. "I feel today that it's glorious to be a woman! It's glorious, glorious to be loved, to know that you are in a man's thoughts, to remember that you control him, even when he is away from your touch, to remember, too, that he is longing for you, no matter how far he goes, you, just you, nobody in all the wide, wide world but you! And it's glorious to feel yourself in his arms, and his eyes drinking the depths of yours, when he's with you again, hungry for you, eager for you, aching for you!

"Yes, dear, it's glorious to be a woman—to be a woman in love and a woman beloved!"

Torrie, who is torn between her desire to please her husband and her longing for a career.

Krassler, who keeps urging Torrie to go back on the stage.

Storrow sat for a full moment without moving after reading this for the second time. Then he deliberately restored the sheet to its place and just as deliberately went on with his examination. His movements were quiet, with the quietude of that torpor which comes from over-tensioned nerves and over-taxed feeling.

He refused to be startled, even to the end, assuring and reassuring himself that he had already discounted everything upon which he might stumble. He imposed upon himself a restraint which turned in upon his own soul the fires to which he refused any freedom of escape. He had sown his dragon's teeth, and now he could reap the whirlwind.

The one dominant feeling that remained with him as he tied up the letters and replaced them in the make-up box and restored that box to the trunk where it belonged, was a feeling of having been duped, tragically and colossally duped. Yet even this impressed him as pettish and deficient in dignity, trivial before the gigantic sweep of passion which was supposed to ensue upon all such discoveries as his.

Beyond this vague and far-reaching sense of betrayal, however, he found the crystallization of mere suspicion into certainty to be shot through with a coloring of relief. He knew now what he had to fight against.

Difficult to Work

He had reached the stage, in fact, when he could stand forlornly proud of his self-possession. He even made it a point to establish his self-control by returning to his work on the proof-sheets. He held himself to that task with a will of iron, going through them page by page, with a sullen and self-defeating determination.

Often, indeed, Storrow found his thoughts wandering. But always he shepherded them relentlessly back, finding it necessary to read a sentence several times before its true import filtered through his mind. When he had reached the last page he methodically rearranged the loose sheets, folded them together, and sealed them in their brown manila envelope. On this envelope he wrote the name and address of his publishers and affixed an unnecessary number of postage stamps.

Then with the movements of a man who was very tired he put on his hat and coat and carried his package to the nearby sub-station drop-wicket at the eastern end of the Metropolitan Building, just north of Twenty-third street. He went through these movements automatically, with practically no memory of having executed them.

When he saw that it was midnight by the huge illuminated dial so high above him he just as automatically turned homeward again, reminding himself that the hour was late and that men at some such hour as this had the habit of going to bed.

A Rich Escort

He stopped at the corner of Twenty-fourth street as he beheld a lean and hungry cat reaching up to the top of a garbage-can placed on the curb. It made his thoughts go back to the Alwyn Arms and the gaunt and straining cat he had once caught sight of, through the bars of a fire-escape, as it reached, whining with desire, up to a window-sill on which a pan of cardinal-red lobsters stood cooling.

Then he thought of Rodin's "La porte de l'Enfer" and the creatures of desire writhing and coiling about that great door. He would satisfy at least one hunger, he decided, as he made an effort to catch the animal skulking in the corner of his house-steps. He would take it up to his room and feed it, give it the meal of its life. But that harried street cat, unused to kindness, was not easy to approach. Storrow even followed it into the shadowed area beneath the steps themselves, stooping low and striving to disarm its suspicions.

He suddenly stood erect, still in the shadow, for a motor car had stopped at the curb within ten paces of him. From this car he saw a man step slowly down and swing open the door. At the same time that he realized this man to be Donnie Eastman he saw the second alighting figure.

He knew it was Torrie even before he caught the sound of her contented little coo of laughter as the heavily-ulstered man ushered her up the worn sandstone steps, with one hand clasping her crooked arm at the elbow.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

ROMANCE OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright 1921 King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"MR. LEE has been telling me how fond he and Dick West are of each other," she said smoothly. "And how much he misses Dick whom he hasn't seen for days. Also, Mr. Lee [illegible] me that he could hardly wait for Mr. Harrison's return. I [illegible] Mr. Lee's impatience to see your husband, but I [illegible] liberty of explaining that [illegible] business representatives [illegible] were in a position to [illegible] Mr. Lee a [illegible]."

Her voice held more than a suggestion of warning as she came to the end of her words. I smiled in friendly fashion and gave her fingers a reassuring pressure before I released her hand. Then I said what I thought must convey volumes to so astute a young woman as Miss Storrs.

A Bit of Explaining

"Dad Lee is new in my life—that in [illegible] closeness of the relationship he's proved between us he doesn't know my husband, Miss Storrs. They've never met. In view of the shortness of a child's memory you might almost say that this—trip marks our first meeting."

I meant this to convey to Miss Storrs that I was ready to accept, without resentment, her hint that Jim's affairs were to be guarded closely from this prodigal father of mine. I meant her to see that I didn't feel close enough to the man who was my father to give him any confidence. Since Jim took our friendship for granted and I'd felt distinct warnings of it at our last meeting I thought this a good time to show my friendly tendencies. Great [illegible] was my [illegible] when Miss Storrs went on with a sort of brutal over-emphasis:

"I'd always taken for granted that you and Mr. Neal Hyland were brother and sister. And so, of course I thought your father would be named Hyland—and be a big, robust [illegible] like Mr. Neal, whom I've seen often though we've never met. I'm afraid [illegible] I rather put your father through the third degree. You aren't much alike, are you, Mrs. Harrison?"

Something in her tone was so cool and insulting that I felt sorry for poor little Dad Lee who stood cringing there before this handsome young woman. He looked so much the under-dog beneath the cold scrutiny of Miss Storrs' eyes that he wrested from me the pity due the weakling. In a whining tone, Dad Lee took it upon himself to answer the woman.

"My girl's like her mother. Any one with half an eye to class could of seen that my wife was a cut above me. So's my daughter, though women of your class don't always see those things."

There was a snarl in his voice, but Miss Storrs didn't wince. Instead she replied with unruffled suavity.

"I wonder if I may have a few moments alone with Mrs. Harrison? If you wouldn't mind waiting outside—Mr. Lee?"

Dad Lee Cringed

Again Dad Lee cringed and shuffled out. In spite of his [illegible] friendship for Dick West I felt sorry for the man I had [illegible] despise. I didn't like to see this [illegible] young woman insulting a [illegible] little old man. But I felt sure he was Jim's enemy, so I didn't permit sentimentality to drive me into taking up the cudgels for [illegible] against this proved [illegible] of Jim's cause.

"This father of yours appears to [illegible] Dick West," said Miss Storrs the moment the door closed after Dad Lee.

"Yes," I replied, noticing she had made a statement instead of asking a question, she nevertheless paused as if for a reply.

"He hasn't seen Dick for several days. He appears to be worried about that," she went on, still eyeing me closely.

To Be Continued.

Indeed She Had.

"I trust, Miss Hill," said an employer to his typist, "that you have something in reserve for a rainy day." "Yes, sir," was the reply. "I am going to marry a gentleman named Mackintosh."

Chow-Chow

Two quarts cucumber pickles, 2 quarts button onions, 2 quarts small green tomatoes, 2 quarts string beans, 2 large heads cauliflower, 1 bunch celery, 3 green peppers, 3 red peppers, 3 cups sugar, 2 cups flour, 6 tablespoons mustard (level), 4 quarts cider vinegar. Remove seeds from peppers. Cut peppers, tomatoes and celery in small pieces. Peel onions; put in whole; also string the beans, break cauliflower into small pieces; sprinkle with cup of salt, and cover with water. Let stand twenty-four hours. Put on stove in brine; let boil and then drain. Make a paste by mixing mustard, tumeric, sugar and flour with a little cold vinegar, afterwards adding rest of vinegar which has been brought to a boil. Add drained vegetables, cucumber pickles and cook slowly for twenty minutes. Bottle. Well to let stand a month before using.

CLEANING METALS

—By Loretto C. Lynch—

EVERY household has its share of metals which have to be cleaned. And unless one has a knowledge of simple chemistry and some of the necessary helps, the metal are often not only spoiled in the cleaning, but the job deteriorates into something one is apt to neglect.

Some definite place should be set aside for the cleaning materials.

The tarnish on silver is due to the sulphur compounds in the air where coal and gas are burned, also in many foods, in wool, in rubber, and in some bleached and dyed materials. This is the reason silversmiths avoid white cotton flannel for their cases for silver. [illegible] prevents tarnish to some degree and so camphor, which absorbs moisture, is put into the silver drawer. There are three methods of cleaning silver—by the use of frictional agents, by boiling in a strong alkaline solution, or by electrolysis.

The frictional materials used are fine whiting and the commercial pastes and powders. Whiting is inexpensive and can be obtained at any drug shop. It should be mixed to a paste with water, ammonia, or alcohol, applied to the silver and allowed to dry. It should then be removed by a soft cloth, chamois or a brush.

The alkaline solution for cleaning silver is made by dissolving four teaspoons of borax, three teaspoons of washing soda (or two teaspoons [illegible]) in a quart of water. The silver is placed in an old kettle or pan, covered with this solution, [illegible] boiled for ten minutes and allowed to cool in the water.

The tarnish that comes on copper, brass or bronze may be removed with either vinegar or buttermilk. The metal should then be washed and a paste of rottenstone mixed to a creamy consistency with oil applied. When the paste dries it may be removed with a soft cloth and the metal rubbed to a polish.

Her Definition.

"What is your definition of a manly man?" he asked.

Mabel looked at him coldly. The clock struck eleven. She hid a yawn behind her hand and said: "My definition of a manly man is one who doesn't stay on and on just because he knows the girl isn't strong enough to throw him out."

TO SPEAK CORRECTLY

HOW CHILDREN SHOULD AND CAN LEARN

By Dr. W. A. McKeever.

CHILDREN learn English best unconsciously.

They pick up a vocabulary faster from three to six than any other time.

Speech is acquired most rapidly and accurately through emotional [illegible].

Not an assigned lesson to learn as such, but a motive for eager, explosive utterance is the secret of a childish mastery of language.

Give each child his turn in talking to the others about a familiar and to him, interesting topic. Let him narrate, describe and explain by turns as he plies his mind and tongue to a familiar, enticing topic and you will soon make a comparatively brilliant linguist of him.

Thus a modest sixth-grade teacher in a large ward school has hit upon a scheme which, she contends, will make the mastery of the mother-tongue easy, rapid and delightful for any ordinary child. But, let us notice a sample of this "natural method":

"How many of you pupils have ever visited a paper mill? All right, Jack, you may come forward and tell the others about your visit—what you saw, who was there and what they did. When you speak use your very best sentences.

"Who in the class has helped in the garden and has learned how to grow vegetables? Very well, Tom, it is your turn next. Tomorrow you may bring one or two samples of vegetables, show them to the class and tell us all how to produce them from the soil.

"Which one of you girls knows all about tidying and cleaning up a room, let us say a sleeping room at home? Elizabeth, that will be the subject of your English lesson. Think the matter over carefully, point by point, and see that nothing is to be omitted. Talk the lesson over with your mother tonight if you wish, and have her give suggestions. You may be all ready to recite as soon as we are through with Tom's story."

Of course, we do not have here a distinctively new method of teaching language or any other subject, but rather the conscious vitalization of an old and partly neglected method. This charming philosophy of teaching English—as enunciated by one who is in fact a genius and yet too modest to permit the public use of her name—should prove a matter of encouragement to the struggling in every common school and every common subject. To paraphrase her method further:

Do not teach abstractions, bring out experience.

Do not drive children to study something for its own sake. No lesson is worth while for its own sake or for the sake of a grade. Rather lead them to the living fount of interest quickened by instinct, experience and emotional desire.

The latest idea in dessert molds. A set of six individual molds in aluminum, with your initial embossed on top so it shows on each dessert

3 Gifts

This week—That Initial Mold Set and two surprise gifts in addition

This is the first time we have made a gift offer like this. It is made to start the dessert season with Jiffy-Jell in your home. And to remind you again how Jiffy-Jell excels.

Buy from your grocer this week six packages Jiffy-Jell. Send us the six JJ trade-marks cut from the fronts of them, and we will send you three gifts to surprise and delight you.

First, we will send the Initial Mold Set shown above. Six individual dessert molds in aluminum, each with your initial embossed so it shows on the dessert.

This is the latest dessert fad. This set where sold would cost you 75 cents.

We will send in addition two other valuable gifts. We will not announce them, for we want to surprise you. All these three gifts will come to you if you send us the trade-marks this week.

Real Fruit in Bottles

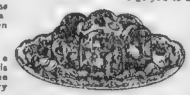

Remember that Jiffy-Jell is the only dessert with the real fruit flavors in bottles.

We crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it. A bottle of this real fruit essence goes in every package.

So Jiffy-Jell is rich in fruit. And fruit as fresh and fragrant as when picked.

Old-style desserts of this kind have the flavor in dry form. In Jiffy-Jell only you get the real fruit juice condensed. Yet it costs no more than the old style.

We want to remind you how Jiffy-Jell excels. So, to start the season, we make this offer, and we urge you to accept it.

Send us the trade-marks from six Jiffy-Jell packages, and we will mail you three valuable gifts.

Please don't forget.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Is this how you see it?

Herbert Hoover is typical of the coming era.

* * *

Knox was an outstanding leader among the too-large army of lawyers who have constituted so preponderating a percentage of our legislative representatives at Washington. Congress has been lopsided with lawyers. Washington has been the goal of every young man graduating from Law School—and more have attained that goal than probably has been good for the country.

* * *

Politics used to be king in this country, and our leading politicians gripped the imagination of the public. They monopolized the limelight. Their comings and goings and utterances were minutely recorded. A prominent Senator was a sort of tin god. The favor of such men was eagerly courted. It used to be said, in fact, that any man's credit was established if he could be seen walking down Fifth avenue with Chauncey M. Depew.

Today commerce is king. The public are far more interested in reading about the careers, the activities and the views of powerful financiers and marshals of industry than in reading about politicians. The phenomenal growth of business organizations has invested those at the head of them with tremendous influence over the well-being of others. The daily bread of so many thousands is dependent upon the acts of great corporation heads that it becomes important what these magnates do or propose to do.

* * *

A Judge Gary, for example, wields infinitely more power over the life and living conditions of a million or more men, women and children than does the most powerful politician. The acts and the views of the outlook entertained by such men as Charles M. Schwab, of Bethlehem Steel; President Rea, of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Louis F. Swift, head of the largest packing company in the world; John D. Ryan, the dominating figure in the copper industry; J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker, James Speyer, Mortimer L. Schiff, Charles E. Mitchell, Charles H. Sabin, Albert H. Wiggin, Edgar L. Marston, and other mighty bankers; Henry Ford, the king pin of the motor industry; Walter C. Teagle, Edward L. Doheny, Henry L. Doherty, Harry Sinclair, and other oil giants; William M. Wood, the arbiter of the woolen manufacturing industry; Julius Rosenwald, the mail order trojan; John H. Patterson, of cash register fame; George Eastman, who has made photographers of us all; John G. Shedd, who now controls Marshall Field & Co.; John Wanamaker, Edward A. Filene of Boston, Michael Friedsam, the able head of B. Altman & Co.; Jesse Straus of Macy's, among merchant princes; Dr. William H. Nichols, head of the chemical and dye combination; the Du Ponts—the views and actions of such men have a tremendously important bearing upon the bringing about of business expansion or reorganization and, consequently, upon the scarcity or abundance of employment.

* * *

Now, is it not logical that there should be a growing demand that experienced, responsible men of large offices, men capable of judging vast business problems, be sent to Washington in larger numbers than heretofore? If, as President Wilson once remarked, diplomacy nowadays has to be shaped by the consideration of the counting house, surely more men familiar with the counting house should be associated with our government.

* * *

The confidence of American business leaders has been greatly strengthened by the presence in Washington, at the helm of vitally important departments, of men like Herbert Hoover and Andrew W. Mellon, as well as such advisers as Charles G. Dawes and Eugene Meyer, Jr.

Looking ahead, it is encouraging to note the entrance into public life of young business-trained men like Theodore Roosevelt, who worked in a carpet factory and later with a financial firm, and F. Trubee Davison, son of one of the most brilliant international bankers America has ever produced.

* * *

Does it not appear as if hereafter more of the men who will administrate the public affairs of the leading industrial nation of the world will be recruited from the ranks of business, banking, industrial, agriculture and labor, and that a law school diplomat will not henceforth be looked upon as the best passport to political place and power? The biggest business of all today is the running of our government. Should not the running of it, therefore, be entrusted more in the future than it has in the past to men of business training?

Corporation Reports

For the August fiscal year the Hendee Manufacturing Co. reports a deficit after charges and adjustment of inventory of $912,078, against net profit of $759,916 for the preceding year.

Parish & Bingham October sales and production are running ahead of the business for September.

Sales for the first eight months of 1921 by the Sweets Co. of America amounted to $1,218,842, and net profits for the same period were $139,518, or at the rate of 11.4 per cent. annually.

For the nine months ended with September the Union Oil of California reports sales of approximately $45,280,000, a decrease of $340,000 from the total of the corresponding period of last year.

OILS ADVANCE HOLD THEIR STRENGTH

Steels Recover and Tobaccos Improve; Strike Threat Affects Railway Shares

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Most stocks were showing gains in New York at noon and the market had a strong tone. There was a continuation n the second hour of the advance which began in the first. Oils led the upturn. Steels improved and rails became slightly firmer, but were affected by strike threats. Motors participated in the forward movement, while tobaccos got on a higher level. Trading was active, first-hour transactions exceeding 170,000 shares. Call loans renewed at 6 per cent. Foreign exchange rallied.

Strongest issues were Mexican Petroleum, Pan American, Union Oil, Houston, Cosden, Atlantic Gulf, Famous Players, Corn Products and Northern Pacific. They were up from one to more than two points at their highest. Weak issues included Ajax Rubber and Royal Dutch.

IRREGULAR AT OPENING.

The market had an irregular opening and initial prices were not far from the Thursday closing level. Oils continued to hold the lead for activity, and had a better tone. Steels were weak as a class. Crucible and Bethlehem B showed more than a point loss within a few minutes. Rails were mixed and inconspicuous in early trading. Studebaker, the only active motor, went down. Trading in sugars was largely confined to American sugar issues, and the preferred sold at its lowest since 1893. While domestic oils continued to show strength, Royal Dutch was weak. Mexican Petroleum and Houston were strongest petroleums. Corn Products made a good gain among food stocks. Tobaccos and tires were a shade lower as a rule, while coppers were steady. At the end of an hour prices had got to a higher level.

COVERING A FACTOR.

Covering of shorts was the most sustaining factor during the morning. The short interest is very large and it is believed by many traders that technical conditions warrant an upward movement, especially as quotations for a number of commodities, including copper, steel and oil, tend upward. Recent selling of stocks has not been liquidation, it is reported. The market is regarded as oversold and a lowering of the call rate, according to calculations by bulls, ought to promote a recovery. Little bears have been more active than big ones. The latter are said to be holding off and ready to switch the moment there is any constructive development in trade or finance. The high call rate is attributed to heavy government withdrawals. Tomorrow they will amount to $25,800,000 in Boston and $127,000,000 in New York.

Railroad Items

In September this year Northern Pacific's gross earnings totaled $9,806,000, a decrease, in comparison with September, 1920, of $1,758,000, or 15.20 per cent.

During the first ten days of October the Chicago & Northwestern Railway handled 51,942 cars compared with 53,272 for the like period a year ago.

For 1920 the Southern Railway shows corporate net income after taxes and charges, of $1,716,148, equal to $2.86 a share earned on the $60,000,000 preferred stock.

Final settlement for the Federal control period have been made by the government with the Union Pacific and subsidiaries for $9,000,000, with the St. Joseph & Grand Island for $1,000,000, and with St. Louis-San Francisco and subsidiaries for $550,000.

Revenue loadings by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy for the first ten days of October totaled 40,128 cars, a decrease of 5.66 per cent. Rock Island's loadings the first seven days this month were 34,146 cars, against 31,925 a year ago. North Western's loadings for ten days were 91,942 against 53,272.

On August 6 Illinois Central stockholders numbered 14,568.

For the eight months ended with August this year the Bangor & Aroostook showed net operating income of $373,678, against $240,958 for the corresponding period of 1920, an increase of 55 per cent. Net operating income for August, 1921, was $71,258, compared with a deficit of $53,084 in July.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 14.—The cotton market was active and barely steady at the opening today, with prices generally 7 to 16 points lower, due to selling by Wall Street, the South and New Orleans, which offset bullish consumption figures from the Census Bureau and buying by the trade. Japanese interests sold near deliveries and bought late months. Liverpool was a seller. After the start local pressure increased and the list declined about 20 points under the previous close. Opening prices were: Oct. 19.00, Dec. 19.10, Jan. 18.70, March 18.55, May 18.15, July 17.76, September 17.28.

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Further cleavage between the domestic oils and other portions of the general list developed Thursday, and before the close the contrast became quite marked. The undertone of the market as a whole was rather unsettled, and in the face of this tendency a strong upward trend was displayed by the leaders in the domestic oil group, with advances of one to two points registered by Pacific Oil, Invincible, Cosden, California Petroleum and Atlantic Petroleum. On the other hand, Mexican Petroleum was under pressure. The air was more or less charged with rumors and quotations on the 8 per cent. preferred were on a basis that hardly inspired confidence.

STEELS were sluggish and generally a shade lower, with the exception of Bethlehem Steel B, which closed unchanged after a somewhat irregular advance. Baldwin Locomotive was active and strong. A heavy undertone in the rails had a somewhat depressing effect on commission house sentiment.

THE wavering attitude of those who have been bullish on the rails was not helped by the weakness that developed in the stock and junior bonds of the Seaboard Air Line. The unfavorable impression was all the more pronounced, owing to the fact that the break came as a climax to a rather extended decline. Attention has been called to the fact that the road had a deficit of more than $160,000 in August and that its earnings for the first eight months of the present year covered only a small portion of its fixed charges.

THE weakness in German marks, which was a feature of the London foreign exchange market Wednesday, continued Thursday and carried the price of this currency down to .71 of a cent.

THE offer by George A. Gaston of $75,000 cash for all of the stock and assets of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore is believed in some quarters to be significant. It is understood that a banking firm with strong connections in Germany is interested with Mr. Gaston in purchasing the company. It is surmised that the bankers, through their foreign connections, see an opportunity for trade which will prove profitable, and, through the revival of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, will have an active corporation to handle it.

PRICES HIGHER ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

But Local Market Is Dull and Narrow During Forenoon; Curb Trend Is Upward

Strength characterized the Boston market at the opening and all the morning but trading was dull and narrow, many usually active issues not appearing on the tape up to noon. While gains were general they were small. Edison rights sold at a new high, but the stock itself, which sold ex-dividend was off 2½. Loew's Theatres advanced a point. Other forenoon changes were fractional. Coppers were quiet and irregular. Packing issues had a firmer tone.

Small gains were made by American Telephone, Copper Range, United Fruit, West End, Carson Hill, Wolverine, Bingham Mines, Swift & Co., Swift International and Eastern Steamship. Fractional losses were shown by North Butte, Arizona, Commercial, Waldorf, Eastern Manufacturing, Atlantic Gulf, Boston & Maine and Calumet & Arizona.

CURB MORE ACTIVE.

Trading on the Curb was of more volume but this market was irregular as to price movement. It improved during the morning. Gilliland and Simms Petroleum were traded in yesterday for the first time in weeks and were in evidence again today. Leaders were Boston & Montana, Crystal, Eureka, Mutual and Hecla Divide, the last named being unusually active. At the end of the morning Crystal was up 4 cents at 26 cents, Eureka 4 cents at 42 cents, Hecla Divide 3 cents at 12 cents, Mutual 4 cents at 56 cents, Gilliland ⅛ at 2⅝ and Simms Petroleum ⅛ at 8⅛. Among declines were United Verde Extension ½ at 26½, Iron Cap 1 at 5⅛, New Rilla 3 cents at 51 cents and Bagdad 1 cent at 22 cents. Alpha recovered a loss and Daddy lost again.

Anthracite Mines Pump More Water Every Day Than New York Uses

THE average daily consumption of water by New York's population of 5,620,000 is 660,200,000 gallons. To keep anthracite mines free of water requires pumps with a capacity of 823,600,000 gallons daily. If there were failure to rid the mines of this tremendous volume of water, destruction would overtake them just as surely as disaster would follow the cutting off of New York's water supply.

For every ton of household and steam anthracite shipped to market, 18 tons of water (on the average) must be raised.

The annual amount of water thus pumped would cover a 200-acre farm to the depth of over a mile. It would form a lake 10 miles long and 2 miles wide 100 feet in depth.

The weight of water hoisted in the anthracite mines each year is nearly 40 per cent greater than the annual production of all kinds of coal in this country. Think of this in terms of water handled!

Constant draining of the mines does not end all of the "water" costs of production. Water must be used almost continuously throughout the process required to make anthracite fit for economical use.

Of these processes, "jigging" is of great importance. Jigs are mechanical devices which separate slate and rock from the coal as it passes through the breaker. Water, forced constently through the jig floats the coal above the refuse.

Anthracite is sprayed almost continuously with water throughout the process of its manufacture. Thus, by removing dirt and dust, mine owners provide standards of quality which guard consumers against inferior coal. Dirty, slate-filled coal would cost less to produce. But the consumer would get less for his money.

So the cost of "mining" water must be added to the cost of producing coal.

This is No. 5 of a series on hard coal facts presented in an effort to help you decide for yourself whether anthracite mine prices are fair. Watch for future advertisements in this newspaper.

JOHN R. MURPHY

We are greatly pleased at the announcement by John R. Murphy of his candidacy for Mayor. He has had a long, honorable and useful public career. He is a man of great ability, of absolutely unstained honor and with an experience in municipal affairs unexcelled by that of any other living man in Boston. He has the courage, the physical strength, the industry, the poise and the fighting ability which are all so necessary in this emotional and confused and bewildering period through which the people of Boston are passing.

We have not the slightest doubt that he will win, and will win by an overwhelming majority.

Champion of the Oppressed

Friends of Ireland, Egypt, India and the Other Downtrodden Peoples Will Feel Senator Knox's Loss

The death of Senator Knox is untimely. He was a very able man with an experience that equaled his ability and a courage that equaled both.

His career as a lawyer and his attitude on domestic questions left a great deal to be desired from the point of view of those who believe that the supreme public consideration is the interest of the average man. He was distinctly a reactionary, and stood with the reactionary, exploiting interests in domestic questions.

But it was most fortunate for this country that he happened to be in the Senate when the Treaty of Versailles and the ratification of the League of Nations came before that body. He was one of the invincible opponents of that assault upon the historic policy of America and upon her most vital national interests.

Those who are determined to force us to wallow in the mire of European intrigue and imperialism have not yet acknowledged defeat or ceased their efforts. Senator Knox, therefore, is a loss which we may feel.

The friends of Ireland, of India, of Egypt and of other oppressed peoples who were saved from the League of Nations, which would have put the power of America behind the oppressor, will hear of the death of Knox with regret.

Stranger Than Fiction

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Truth is not only stranger than fiction; it is stronger.

In fact, truth is often so absurd, so entirely improbable and so to speak, so lacking in verisimilitude, that a writer of fiction has to tone it down to keep the reading public from rejecting it as too outlandish.

Mark Twain said truly that the difference between truth and fiction is that fiction has to seem possible.

Here, for instance, is a story of passion and elemental storm which is literally true, but which as fiction would hardly be accepted by any story magazine.

A young Pole named Hoynoski was brought into court. He and his wife, Vera, were the principals in what the judge termed "the strangest triangle story I ever heard."

Hoynoski had been arraigned on a technical charge of felonious assault. The facts in the case, as brought out in the evidence, were these:

According to a custom among the Russian peasantry, a wife who has been untrue must brand herself upon the breast with the sign of the cross, if she would purge her soul of the guilt.

Mrs. Hoynoski had attempted to inflict this penance upon herself by searing her flesh with a can-opener which she had heated red hot in the stove. She drew one line upon her naked breast, but the pain was so extreme that before she could cross it she fainted in agony.

The two children, who had been watching their mother with wonder, screamed and ran as she fell to the floor.

The husband at the time was praying before an ikon in another room. He rushed in and, seeing his wife's prostrate and seemingly lifeless form upon the floor, fled to the street, tearing his hair and shouting for a doctor.

The police arrested him, and he and his wife were brought into court.

When the judge ascertained the facts he dismissed the prisoner.

Here are all the elements of tragedy, for the fundamental cause of every tragedy is some kind of weakness.

Out of weakness arises the consciousness of wrong.

This in turn brings the idea of punishment, wherein we seek to purge the evil by pain, inflicted either by one's self as penance, or by another as vengeance.

Then come pity, forgiveness and vicarious suffering, which divine qualities play in pathetic beauty above our animalities and our moral defects.

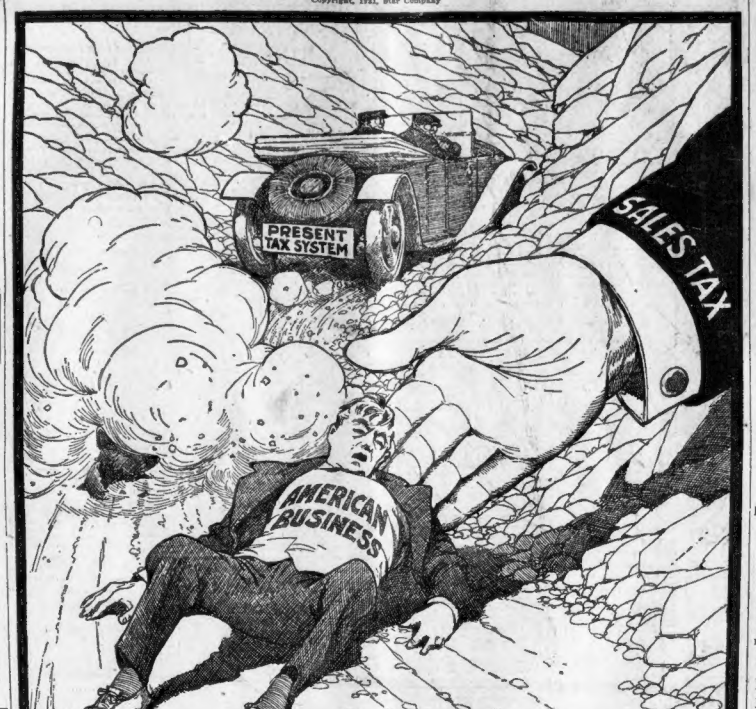

Boston a Clean City

When Mr. Pelletier says that Boston is one of the cleanest cities, morally, in the world, he speaks the absolute and unvarnished truth.

Boston is not only a clean city, compared with other cities, but it is a clean city today compared with the Boston of the past. Our public life and our private life in Boston relatively are good. Vice receives less official protection in this city than in almost any city in the world, and the citizens of no city are more sensitive to dishonor among her public men than the citizens of Boston.

Women Smoke on Horseback

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Here's the newest fad for girls—smoking while horseback riding.

You can see them any time now careening on their chestnut steeds along the bridle paths of the city parks as a trail of cigarette smoke hangs behind like a silken veil.

"The girls seem to like it, anyway they do it," said Mrs. J. K. Stauffer, whose husband owns a fashionable riding academy.

"My husband was just talking about a pretty girl he saw smoking while she was riding in the parks. You would be surprised how many girls—yes, and married women, too—light their cigarettes when they mount for a ride."

The smoking custom of girls in riding breeches and Norfolk coats along the cinder roads of the parks has also been taken up at some of the beaches.

There inflated inner tubes are substituted for horses and the mermaids float lazily into the lake blowing smoke as they go. After dusk the glow from the cigarettes looks like fireflys at play above the rippling waters.

DO NOT JUDGE TOO HASTILY

When you are tempted to judge another, think twice.

You may think that you know your friend pretty well, and you may feel that you are pretty fairly informed as to his or her business or social matters; but do not let it cause you to judge or hold an absolutely fixed opinion where this particular friend is concerned.

And if you do not know all there is to be known about your best friend, why dare to judge him?

Most persons have a few reservations.

The world is too sophisticated to contain many persons who wear their hearts on their sleeves or who tell all they know to anyone.

Also, what of the person who set out deliberately to blind your eyes to a whole lot of things they wish you not to understand?

It is wise for you to have all the actual knowledge you possess of others pigeonholed and on tap for your own benefit, but arranged in such a way that you can change your viewpoint occasionally as circumstances allow.

Be careful in voicing an opinion, even about your best friend.

Heat of Sun Uncertain

By Garrett P. Serviss

"HOW hot is the sun?" asks a reader.

Nobody knows, for sure, how hot the sun is. Its temperature (at its surface) has been estimated by different authorities, at different times, all the way from 2,000 degrees to 18,000,000 degrees, Fahrenheit!

This does not mean that the sun is 5,000 times hotter at one time than at another, but simply that the figures that calculation gives as representing its temperature vary with the assumptions on which the calculation is based.

The tendency now among men of science is to adopt the lower rather than the higher estimates, and it is usually said in present-day textbooks that the temperature of the sun is probably 10,000 or 12,000 degrees. That is about three times as high as any artificial temperature that we can produce.

Sir Isaac Newton's Figures

Sir Isaac Newton calculated the sun's temperature at nearly 4,000,000 degrees, Secchi made it 18,000,000 by one method of calculation, and only 250,000 by another. Ericsson, the inventor of the Monitor, thought Newton's method was best, and put the figures at from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000. The estimates of Zollner, Spencer and Lane ranged from 50,000 to 100,000, and those of Pouillet, Deville and Vicaire from 3,000 to 10,000. Professor Young thought 18,000 degrees was about the correct figure.

The principal difficulty arises from the fact that we do not know for certain what is the law connecting the temperature of the surface of a highly heated body with the amount of radiation that is given off in a unit of time, say a second.

The sun is extremely hot, and you would find it so if you could touch it. But you never could get to it, for at a distance of a quarter of a million miles it would shrivel you up in an instant! Nevertheless, the rays that it sends to the earth are not in themselves, hot.

They impart, but do not possess, temperature. On their unobstructed way through space they are no more heat than the electric impulses transmitted through a telephone wire are sound.

Just as those impulses may be transformed into sound by setting a diaphragm in motion, so the sun's rays are transformed into heat by setting the molecules of any body they fall upon into vibration.

The space through which the rays pass on their ninety-odd-million-mile journey to the earth is not heated by them because it contains nothing that is capable of being set into molecular vibration by their impact.

Heat is a state in which the invisibly minute particles, of which all matter is made up, are kept in more or less violent agitation among themselves. This agitation produces vibrations in the all-enveloping ether, and these etheric vibrations traveling swiftly away in all directions from the heated body constitute what we call radiation, or radiant energy.

Radiation Sent Through Ether

Striking upon a colder body the radiation reproduces in it molecular agitation similar to that which the first heated body possessed. As this is the way in which the sun affects the earth—by sending radiation through the ether capable of producing the molecular vibration, or agitation, called heat—we see that the sun itself must be a hot body, although the rays which its heat gives rise to are not themselves hot.

It is the same with the sun's light. The days of light are not light in themselves. For instance, to show what is meant, suppose you were placed out in empty space, facing so that you would look sidewise at the light rays passing from the sun to the earth. You would not see them at all. You could only see them if you looked directly at the sun, so that the rays would enter your eyes, and, striking upon the retina, produce there the impression of light.

The rays passing by and not entering your eyes would be invisible because, in open space, there is no medium like the atmosphere to scatter the rays in all directions and thus produce an illumination all around.

The sky at night is full of passing sunbeams and starbeams, a vast and inextricable web of radiations, but they lie beyond the limits of the atmosphere, and only those are transformed into light which, by reflection from a planet, in the case of sunbeams, or by coming straight into the eye from a star, directly affect the nerves of vision.

Letter to the Editor

Disarmament

Editor Boston American:

I read in the Boston American of the delegates appointed by President Harding, Senators Lodge and Underwood and Secretary Hughes, who I think are the best we could have to aid the British, because I consider them half and half, American and British. Now as election is not far off, could there not be a regular elected committee by the vote of the people, say for instance, three one-hundred-per-cent. Americans like Senators Johnson and Read and William Randolph Hearst, who would have the interest of America at heart and not have the wool pulled over their eyes, as happened with the League of Nations. Then if the British put anything over on these men we will be sure they did their best. I see the same crowd that were for the League of Nations are for disarmament, but if the people have the say at the election they can't get by.

Oh, Canada, How Can You?

Canada is now building millions of dollars' worth of machinery that has been ordered by the Russian Soviet Government. Perhaps Canada is trying to spoil the Autumn for our people, who tremble with terror whenever Bolshevism is mentioned.

Take Not Strangers' Word For It

When Japan disarms we ought to have several trustworthy witnesses present to verify the fact.

This Has Become an Important Matter

The young man who is thinking of getting married should be sure before he goes too far that he can afford to buy her the kind of soft drinks to which she has become accustomed.

LIVES MADE SAD FROM HASTY ACTION

By Nellie Bly

"IF I only had"——

These words of remorse and regret fill the lives of many persons. Those who are thoughtless, those who are bad tempered, those who are impatient and those who lack self-control and wisdom have their whole existence filled with regret and remorse.

There is no more bitter pang than the regret for having said or done something irredeemable. To have spoken in anger words that have injured is a sorrow that can never be eradicated. To have done some act that has injured another or reflected upon oneself is a grief that is lost only in the grave.

If a person would only learn to consider in advance before making a hasty remark or taking a hasty step he would spare unending regrets which he must bear through life.

"If I only had" been kinder, less impatient, less inconsiderate; "if I had only" considered the other's feeling—these are the saddest thoughts that a human being must bear. The young are not given to reflection and seldom to regret and remorse. Nevertheless, they cannot escape the responsibilities of their words and acts. As years accumulate then they begin to look back and to suffer the pangs which come from that terrible self-interrogation, "if I only had."

Regret That Never Ends

Death, which leaves no opportunity for forgiveness, is the severest reproach one can harbor in heart and soul to the very grave. Regret that comes from some word or act which ends a friendship or a love is like an incurable illness—it is always with one and cannot be driven away. Millions of people have borne to their deaths the regret of a hasty action which deprives them of that success in life that is the due of every living creature.

Before you are unkind and ill-tempered to anyone try to think what you would do if that one was forever removed from your life. Would you not alter your actions immediately? Would you not try by word, as well as by act, to retain that person—be it father, mother, sister, brother, lover or friend? If you are a child, are you laying up a life of regrets in your conduct toward your parents? If you are a parent, are you sowing a world of regrets for yourself from your training and treatment of your children? If you are a wife, are you daily piling up regrets which all eternity cannot look out? If you are a husband, are you conducting yourself so that regret will tinge every joy that ever comes to you? If you are a student, are you lazily neglecting or eliding through your studies and so piling up remorse and regret which you must carry through life? If you are in business, are you doing the millions of dishonest little things in your greed, which will rest on your mind and heart through life—a shame and a reproach?

Though you have millions of friends you must live your life alone with your own soul. You may evade and fool an acquaintance, or even those near and dear, but you cannot fool your own soul. It is your master and you cannot still its voice so long as you live. And the older you get, the louder gets that voice of your soul.

What do you think will be the regrets and the remorse of a wife and children who through nagging, ill-temper, inconsideration and unreasonable demands, drive from them, from thier homes and lives, their father and supporter.

Her Courtship

Will that wife not recall the days of her courtship, the joy she felt when he asked her to be his wife? Will she not recall the many little tendernesses of their early married days? Then she will think of her impatience, how wearied he looked when he came from business, how bitter became her tongue and words when some request was denied. She will think over every single thing and live over every day and minute of her married life until her self-regrets will rise mountain high, and then she will say, over and over and over: "If I only had—"

Those daughters will remember every insolent word and disrespectful attitude to that father. They will remember that he went out every morning and worked the whole day long just to support and maintain them. They will recall how tired he looked, how depressed he often became, how mortified he was when unable to gratify their demands for more and more money. They will recall how impatient they were if he dared to be ill and to remain at home. They will remember how bored they were if he asked them to do some little act for him or to give him the pleasure of their company. They will recall a million things which will build the mountain of reproaches that they will face all their lives.

But there will be the regret which comes with death—it cannot be blotted out. For father has gone.

DON'T TELL ALL YOUR STORY AT ONCE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

DON'T tell your whole story at once. You may cease to be interesting when we know you. Besides, we all need to wear the mask of mystery in order to retain the secret charm of personality.

Perhaps, if we are never to meet you again, you want to get the whole of your autobiography out of your system, because you may never get another chance to tell us the story of your life.

On the other hand, if this is to be our only meeting, why spend upon us an honor to which only your best friend is entitled?

Isn't it curious that so many persons are so generous with themselves? Or, perhaps, it is not really generosity, but unrestrained egotism which prompts them to pour themselves forth so profusely at the slightest provocation.

Naturally, each of us being the centre of his own universe, we take for granted that we are all important and interesting to one another as we are to ourselves.

That is, unless we have cultivated enough of a sense of humor to prevent our taking ourselves quite so seriously!

Universal Topic

Probably, one reason that weather was created and planted everywhere was that it might serve as the universal topic of conversation, which would make it unnecessary to talk of ourselves on first meeting.

The writer recalls that he carried with him, from early youth well along towards maturer years, the simple habit of taking seriously the commonplace greeting: How are you?

When he was met with that salutation, he used to accept it as a solicitous inquiry about his health, and would immediately treat the questioner to so much of an "organ recital" as would sing on account of the state of his body and spirit.

Correspondingly, he would expect, when he met another with this friendly greeting, to be allowed vicariously to shoulder all the other's pains and woes. He felt a touch of genuine disappointment when anyone thus met would apparently ignore his question.

One day he came across the familiar joke about the serviceable Pat and Mike. Said Mike: "How-dedo, Pat, and how are you this feine marrnin'? Not that I care a dum, but it helps to make conversashun!"

From that classic, the writer learned much of the value of self-restraint, and of the limited and relative interest of others in you and in your health.

Of course, it is not necessary to move to the other extreme and to try to become a clam. After all, we are human and we want and need the human touch. Rightly, we seek contact, and we wish to get and to give sympathy.

Even with casual acquaintance, we like to compare notes, as it were, and to match opinions. Very well, after you have put the weather out of the way, then begin to discuss ideas—anything almost, except yourself!

A Reminiscence

At the risk of putting himself under the suspicion of having reached anecdotage, the writer asks the privilege of offering another bit of reminiscence. He promises, however, not to tell his whole story at one time.

As a young man, he had the coveted opportunity of meeting one of the great men of our day. He had dinner and several hours with his reverenced superior. To his surprise, when he left he realized that the great man had given him practically nothing, but that he had kept his young visitor busy at self-revelation. What was just what the big man wanted!

That experience also bore rich fruit; for the writer learned therefrom to give people a good time by the simple expedient of letting them do the talking. He made it his habit and absorbs.

That is not canny selfishness, but it is acting on the knowledge that practically all persons like to be autobiographical—and that one has more to learn and to gain from listening than from talking.

Also, that acquired habit—and it can be acquired by you—represents the surest protection that it is wise to hedge our personality with silence.

For thus we become more significant; our character deepens, our feelings wax more intense, our mind does actual thinking, our spirit soars; and—

We have more of a story to tell, when, on occasion, we choose, to do the telling to someone who really wants to hear it.

Opportunity Still Calls

"Chiropody," says an advertisement, "offers men and women unlimited opportunities in a dignified and highly remunerative profession." Instead of living from hand to mouth, learn chiropody, and get a footing in the world.
